

Lehman Mortgage Proposal Is Killed By Assembly Vote

Bitter Discussion Precedes Final Vote Which Both Party Members Insist Is 'Tapering Off' Against Pressure

GOP Senators Who Oppose Sales Tax, Albany Probe Fight Pressure

Albany, N. Y., May 17 (AP)—Democratic Governor Lehman's recommendation that a mortgage moratorium be qualified to force refinancing where feasible, was defeated 81 to 62 today in the Assembly, despite the support of both Democratic and Republican leaders.

Immediately afterward, the Assembly without debate unanimously approved and sent to the governor a measure to extend from next January to July 1, 1940, the emergency period during which real property mortgages shall not be foreclosed.

Lengthy and at times bitter debate preceded the final vote on the refinancing bill which saw virtually the entire Democratic membership join with Republicans in opposition to the measure, termed a "tapering off" process by the governor.

Lee B. Mailler, Orange county Republican, introduced the bill, and the debate in support, asserting it sought only to lift the ban against foreclosure of mortgages made prior to 1932 when a court finds refinancing may be carried out without damage to property owners.

Daniel E. Fitzpatrick, Queens Democrat, pointing to the plight of small home owners who bought property when prices are high and then suffered loss of income or jobs, said passage of the bill would bring about a lawyers' "Roman holiday."

Restoration Action

Republican majority leaders, with opposition of their own legislators still threatening defeat of two measures demanded by party chieftains, moved today to restore $1,250,000 of the $30,000,000 G. O. P. reduction in Governor Lehman's budget.

The concession, for which bills were introduced, involves modification of decreases in state aid for highways.

Meantime Senate Republican opponents of a suggested sales tax for local relief financing and a proposed legislative investigation of alleged political corruption in Albany county were reported standing against pressure of party chieftains for approval of both.

Final action on the sales tax bill against which at least four of 26 Republican senators are committed, could be taken today but Majority Leader Joe R. Hanley said its consideration would "depend on the votes."

The minority leadership said not a Democratic vote would be given the proposal.

Remains in Committee

The resolution for investigation of Albany county, already approved by the assembly, remained in judiciary committee.

Several Republican opponents predicted privately its defeat despite the appeal of Edwin F. Jackle, chairman of the Republican state executive committee, for approval and his assurance the party leadership is "solidly in support" of the investigation.

Jackle asserted in a letter to Republican Senators that "the shocking disclosures in the last gubernatorial campaign remain undenied and require sweeping investigation."

Both Senate and Assembly pressed action on heavy calendars as the intra-party wrangle over the sales tax and the Albany investigation drew new predictions from leaders of adjournment by Saturday "at the earliest." They had hoped to end the session tomorrow.

The Assembly scheduled a vote on a resolution which will determine whether a constitutional amendment to legalize pari-mutuel betting shall be submitted to the people next November.

The proposal was passed by the 1938 legislature and received the required second approval by the Senate last week.

Republican leaders, in agreeing to modify some of the cuts in Governor Lehman's $415,000,000 budget, substituted for a bill to reduce town highway aid for a year a measure specifying a flat contribution of $40 a mile, eliminating the "matching" provision by towns.

They amended a bill which would suspend for one year state aid for county highways to provide for a state contribution of $15 a mile instead of the present $30 a mile.

They also announced modification of a bill which would have eliminated all official referees as of July 1. The new proposal would abolish the official referee system for the future but would continue all present referees in office.

Their salaries beginning July 1, however, would be fixed at one-half instead of two-thirds of the salary they received previously as judges.

Fire Chief Points Out New Law That Was Born in Ulster

Monthly Meeting of Volunteers Told Group Passed First Resolution; Guest Speaker Is Flemming

Legislation giving the town boards the power to regulate hotels and summer boarding houses, which has now become a law of the state, had its origin in a resolution passed by the Ulster County Volunteer Firemen's Association about two years ago.

This law is aimed at what Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy last evening at a meeting of the association held in the Spring Street Lutheran Church dubbed "fire-traps and matchboxes" in calling the attention of the county firemen to the provisions of the new law, and urging that each fire department in Ulster county bring the law to the attention of the town boards.

The association members were guests of the Rapid Hose Co. of Hone street.

Reads Communication

The fire chief read a communication from Seth T. Cole enclosing a copy of the bill which amends the town law by giving town boards power to regulate hotels, inns, boarding houses, rooming houses, lodging houses, associations, clubs or any building or part of a building used in the business of renting rooms containing total number of beds providing accommodations for more than five people, by specifying type of construction, manner of operation, and by assuring sanitation and cleanliness.

It is now possible under the terms of this bill for the town board of any town to adopt ordinances and rules which will provide adequate fire protection for guests in hotels and boarding houses.

Mr. Cole in his communication wrote: "I wish to congratulate your association upon having made this valuable suggestion and feel that the bill constitutes a distinct contribution along fire prevention and human life safety lines."

Fire Chief Murphy urged the delegates at the meeting to take

70,000 Germans Begin Work On Census for Nazi Party

Berlin, May 17 (AP)—A volunteer army of 70,000 Germans began work today on a census which will afford the Nazi regime information on which to base further regimentation of the life of the nation.

One important purpose of the count, it was officially stated, is to determine exactly what callings, trades, professions or branches of labor are too scantily supplied to satisfy the needs of the nation and which ones are overcrowded from the national viewpoint.

Meanwhile the axis powers, Germany and Italy, emphasized "Colonial solidarity"—united action for overseas gains—as a new phase of their policy. Simultaneous tours of fortified frontier zones overlooking France by Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini underscored the axis unity.

Social Security Law Changes Are Approved

Proposals Would Add $1,200,000,000 to Benefits in Next Five Years for Aged, Widows, Orphans and Dependent Parents; No Net Increase in System as Whole

Washington, May 17 (AP)—The House ways and means committee has given final approval to proposed changes in the social security law adding $1,200,000,000 to benefits in the next five years for the aged and for widows, orphans and dependent parents.

Members disclosed today that the committee had rejected a motion by Rep. Robertson (D-Vt.) to delete the new or additional benefits from legislation under consideration.

The approved proposals would increase old-age pensions in the early years of the security system and would lower them later. Benefit payments would start next January 1 instead of January 1, 1942.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, social security board chairman, said there would be no net increase in the cost of the system as a whole.

Covered by Taxes

While the increase proposed in the bill would cost $1,200,000,000 more than the present law from 1940 to 1944, inclusive, Altmeyer explained that social security taxes would cover it. Furthermore, he said, a reserve fund would not continue to build up because it would be used more in the early years and there would be less drain in the later years.

Under the new plan, a worker who becomes 65 years old on January 1, 1940, and who has been making an average of $100 a month since the old-age insurance program went into effect on January 1, 1937, could retire on his birthday in 1940 and get benefits of $25.75 a month for the rest of his life. Under present law he would get only one lump sum payment of $126.

If his wife also were 65, he would receive 50 per cent more, or a total of $38.63 a month. On his death, the widow would get three-fourths of the amount he was getting, or $19.31 monthly while she lived.

Other Benefits

Benefits also would be provided for younger widows and minor children. The widow of a man who had earned an average of $100 a month for three years and who died on January 1, 1940, would get $19.31 a month. If she had two minor children, she would get $45.07 until the children were 16, or until they were 18, if they remained in school.

The widow, with or without children, would get an additional benefit at age 65 of $19.31 monthly during her lifetime.

If the same worker died and left no widow or children but a dependent parent, the latter would receive $12.88 a month.

A single man with 40 years coverage and an average monthly wage of $100 during that period would get only $35 a month under the new plan, compared with $51.25 under present law.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, May 17 (AP)—The position of the treasury May 15: Receipts, $12,869,257.91; expenditures, $36,420,452.39; net balance, $3,046,631,554.17; working balance included $2,379,026,256.00; customs receipts for month, $13,141,383.07; receipts for fiscal year (July 1), $4,352,265,834.96; expenditures, $7,972,537,722; excess expenditures included $2,727,659,336.21; excess of expenditures, $3,040,488,702.76; gross debt, $40,230,096,659.86; increase above previous day, $25,824,613.16; gold assets, $15,867,018,622.37.

Parochial Students Will Get Free Rides Under New Law

Albany, N. Y., May 17 (AP)—Free transportation became available to students of parochial schools today with Governor Lehman's approval of a bill implementing a new constitutional provision which validates their eligibility.

The chief executive signed the measure soon after the legislature passed and sent him another which would give to sectarian school pupils the same state health and welfare services now extended to public school students.

The governor signed three other bills, carrying out certain of the Republican-sponsored $30,000,000 reductions in his $115,000,000 budget, would:

Eliminate the statutory amount of $425 as the minimum amount of state aid to be received by any common school district.

Require the state education commissioner, in determining state aid, to deduct 10 per cent from amounts for transportation of pupils and construction of school buildings.

Fix at $540 the maximum amount which school superintendents shall receive from the state for expenses.

Explaining that reductions in his recommended appropriation for state aid for education "became effective immediately upon final passage of the appropriation bill," the governor said: "I have no alternative but to sign these bills which prescribe the method for the apportionment of the reduced appropriation."

Meantime the Senate approved and referred to the Assembly a revised bill which, designed to meet objections voiced by the governor in vetoing a similar proposal last week, would allow osteopaths to perform minor operations but require they prove themselves qualified to the state board of regents.

The Senate defeated, 30 to 14, a measure which would have limited to 75 cents the markup by theatre ticket brokers' of prices on tickets for resale. Opponents claimed the measure would "put legitimate brokers out of business."

George and Elizabeth Greet Throng Informally by Waving From Empress of Australia

King Gives Talk In Response to Welcoming Address, King Praises Loyalty

Quebec, May 17 (AP)—King George VI today became the first reigning British monarch to set foot on North American soil when he and Queen Elizabeth landed at Quebec for their tour of the United States and Canada.

The King and Queen made their landing from the liner Empress of Australia at 9:35 a. m., E. S. T., to be welcomed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and leaders of Canada and the Province of Quebec.

The ceremonial welcome took place in the shadow of the giant cliffs which General Wolfe's army scaled 180 years ago to win "New France" for the British crown.

King George wore the uniform of an admiral of the fleet. The Queen was dressed in a pearl gray ensemble with an off-the-face hat of the same color.

Tremendous Welcome

King George made his way down the flag-decked gangway just a step ahead of his smiling consort. A tremendous welcome arose, cheering, pealing bells, screaming ships' whistles, the roar of airplanes.

Canada's first view of her sovereigns was one of pleasing and unexpected informality, the King and Queen smiling and waving from the ship's rail to crowds below just before the landing.

The crowds got their first good view of the King when he left the welcoming dais and, with an officer, inspected the guard of a company of Canadian grenadiers.

The King and Queen entered the specially built royal automobile, and they moved off on the route to the Quebec provincial legislative buildings.

The royal procession consisted of two open cars and several closed cars of officials. The King and Queen rode alone.

Cheering came in great waves, punctuated by welcoming cries in Quebec French and the pealing of many church bells, as the royal car climbed the narrow winding cobblestone streets that lead from the riverfront to the "upper town."

At 10:10 a. m. E. S. T., the procession reached the rambling legislative buildings for the welcome to Quebec province by Premier Maurice Duplessis.

Thousands thronged the lawns around the buildings and cheered as the king and queen entered.

King Replies

Duplessis spoke in French and the king replied in the same language. The monarch paid tribute to the loyalty of the French-Canadian people.

"The spirit of tolerance in which the two great races (of Canada) dwell side by side in this province is an example to the entire world," King George said. "This harmony augurs well for the future of Canada."

The Empress of Australia left her overnight anchorage off the Islands of Orleans at 7:15 a. m. (E. S. T.), today and started her 18-mile voyage to Quebec.

The liner had spent the night off the village of St. Jean.

Stringent precautions were taken to prevent any mishap in today's docking of the liner Empress of Australia to set King George VI and Queen Elizabeth ashore for their visit to Canada and the United States.

Complete clearance of a five-mile-long area of the Quebec harbor was ordered by the department of transport to permit free maneuvering of the white liner and her convoy of four British and Canadian warcraft.

The zone was ordered closed to general traffic on the mile-wide St. Lawrence river some time before the arrival of the Empress of Australia from her overnight anchorage, off the village of St. Jean, Island of Orleans, 18 miles downstream from this gateway to the Dominion.

The Empress of Australia, 11 days out of Portsmouth, England, and two days behind schedule because of fog and ice on the Atlantic, splashed her anchors in the St. Lawrence off St. Jean at 10:32 o'clock (E. S. T.) last night.

That left 18 miles to be covered today before the ceremonial welcome at Wolfe's Cove, Quebec Harbor, final destination of the royal vessel and the scene of a great ceremonial welcome under the battlements of this old fortified city.

Farmers Get Glimpse

French-Canadian farmers on the Island of Orleans, working at dawn with their oxen, were the first to hail the royal vessel today.

Changes Are Approved*Proposals Would Add $1,200,000,000 to Benefits in Next Five Years for Aged, Widows,
Orphans and Dependent Parents; No
Net Increase in System as Whole

Washington, May 17 (AP)—The House ways and means committee has given final approval to proposed changes in the social security law adding $1,200,000,000 to benefits in the next five years for the aged and for widows, orphans and dependent parents.

Members disclosed today that the committee had rejected a motion by Rep. Robertson (D., Va.) to delete the new or additional benefits from legislation under consideration.

The approved proposals would increase old-age pensions in the early years of the security system and would lower them later. Benefit payments would start next January 1 instead of January 1, 1942.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, social security board chairman, said there would be no net increase in the cost of the system as a whole.

Covered by Taxes

While the increase proposed in the bill would cost $1,200,000,000 more than the present law from 1940 to 1944, inclusive, Altmeyer explained that social security taxes would cover it. Furthermore, he said, a reserve fund would not continue to build up because it would be used more in the early years and there would be less drain in the later years.

Under the new plan, a worker who becomes 65 years old on January 1, 1940, and who has been making an average of $100 a month since the old-age insurance program went into effect on January 1, 1937, could retire on his birthday in 1940 and get benefits of $25.75 a month for the rest of his life. Under present law he would get only one lump sum payment of $126.

If his wife also were 65, he would receive 50 per cent more, or a total of $38.63 a month. On his death, the widow would get three-fourths of the amount of her husband's benefit, or $19.31 monthly while she lived.

Other Benefits

Benefits also would be provided for younger widows and minor children. The widow of a man who had earned an average of $100 a month for three years and who died on January 1, 1940, would get $19.31 a month. If she had two minor children, she would get $45.07 until the children were 16, or until they were 18, if they remained in school.

The widow, with or without children, would get an additional benefit of $19.31 if she had two minor children, she would get $45.07 until the children were 16, or until they were 18, if they remained in school.

If the same worker died and left no widow or children but was survived by a dependent parent, the latter would receive $12.88 a month.

Parochial Students Will Get Free Rides Under New Law

Albany, N. Y., May 17 (AP)—Free transportation became available to students of parochial schools today with Governor Lehman's approval of a bill implementing a new constitutional provision which validates their eligibility.

The chief executive signed the measure soon after the legislature passed and sent him another which would give to sectarian school pupils the same state health and welfare services now extended to public school students.

The governor signed three other bills which, carrying out certain of the Republican-sponsored $30,000,000 reductions in his $415,000,000 budget, would:

Eliminate the statutory amount of $425 as the minimum amount of state aid to be received by any common school district.

Require the state education commissioner, in determining state aid, to deduct 10 per cent from amounts for transportation of pupils and construction of school buildings.

George and Elizabeth Greet Throongs Informally by Waving From Empress of Australia*King Gives Talk*In Response to Welcoming
Address, King Praises Loyalty

Quebec, May 17 (AP)—King George VI today became the first reigning British monarch to set foot on North American soil when he and Queen Elizabeth landed at Quebec for their tour of the United States and Canada.

The King and Queen made their landing from the liner Empress of Australia at 9:35 a. m., E. S. T., to be welcomed by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and leaders of Canada and the Province of Quebec.

The coronation welcome took place in the shadow of the giant cliffs which General Wolfe's army scaled 180 years ago to win "New France" for the British crown.

King George wore the uniform of an admiral of the fleet. The Queen was dressed in a pearl gray ensemble with an off-the-face hat of the same color.

Tremendous Welcome

King George made his way down the flag-decked gangway just a step ahead of his smiling consort. A tremendous welcome arose, cheering, pealing bells, screaming ships' whistles, the roar of airplanes.

Canada's first view of her sovereigns was one of pleasing and unexpected informality, the King and Queen smiling and waving from the ship's rail to crowds below just before the landing.

The crowds got their first good view of the King when he left the welcoming dais and, with an officer, inspected the guard of a company of Canadian grenadiers.

The King and Queen entered the specially built royal automobile and they moved off on the route to the Quebec provincial legislative buildings.

The royal procession consisted of two open cars and several closed cars of officials. The King and Queen rode alone.

Cheering came in great waves, punctuated by welcoming cries in Quebec French and the pealing of many church bells, as the royal car climbed the narrow winding cobblestone streets that lead from the riverfront to the "upper town."

At 10:10 a. m. E. S. T., the procession reached the rambling legislature buildings for the welcome to Quebec province by Premier Maurice Duplessis.

Thousands thronged the lawns around the building and cheered as the king and queen entered.

King Replies

Duplessis spoke in French and the king replied in the same language. The monarch paid tribute to the loyalty of the French-Canadian people.

"The spirit of tolerance in which the two great races (of Canada) dwell side by side in this province is an example to the entire world," King George said. "This harmony augurs well for the future of Canada."

The Empress of Australia left her overnight anchorage off the islands of Orleans at 7:15 a. m. (E. S. T.), today and started her 18-mile voyage to Quebec.

The liner had spent the night off the village of St. Jean. Stringent precautions were taken to prevent any mishap in today's docking of the liner Empress of Australia to set King George VI and Queen Elizabeth ashore for their visit to Canada and the United States.

Complete clearance of a five-mile-long area of the Quebec harbor was ordered by the department of transport to permit free maneuvering of the big white liner and her convoy of four British and Canadian warcraft.

The zone was ordered closed to general traffic on the mile-wide St. Lawrence river some time before the arrival of the Empress of Australia from her overnight anchorage, off the village of St. Jean, Island of Orleans, 18 miles downstream from this gateway to the Dominion.

The Empress of Australia, 11 days out of Portsmouth, England, and two days behind schedule because of fog and ice on the Atlantic, splashed her anchors in the St. Lawrence off St. Jean at 10:32 o'clock (E. S. T.) last night.

That left 18 miles to be covered today before the coronation welcome at Wolfe's Cove, Quebec Harbor, final destination of the royal vessel and the scene of a great coronation welcome under the battlements of this old fortified city.

Farmers Get Glimpse

French-Canadian farmers on the Island of Orleans, working at dawn with their oxen, were the first to hail the royal vessel today.

Health Film Aids Pneumonia Drive

The motion picture "Serum to Windham" currently being shown at the Broadway Theatre is considered an important part of New York State's new health drive—that against pneumonia. Dr. H. S. Ingraham, state health officer of this district, said today.

"I want to emphasize," said Dr. Ingraham, "that 'Serum to Windham' is an official production of the State of New York and is being distributed as a part of a determined battle of science against one of man's worst enemies, pneumonia. In giving an opportunity for the spread of the picture's important scientific message, theatre owners and managers are co-operating with the State Department of Health to alleviate physical suffering and save lives in New York state."

"Serum to Windham" is a true story based on an actual happening in the Catskill Mountains where a youth was stricken with a rarer type of pneumonia. Realizing the importance of prompt diagnosis and treatment, a country doctor set emergency wheels in motion. Laboratory, New York city police, railroad workers, state troopers and others participated in getting the serum to Windham in time to save the youth's life. Blizzards, snow drifts, and sub-zero weather faced the men delivering the serum.

Market Dropped in Tuesday's Trading

The market moved decisively downward yesterday as trading stepped up a bit in volume, total being 620,000 shares. Stocks opened below Monday's closing prices and slid steadily down during the day. At the close industrial issues showed a loss of 2.79 points, to 129.86 in the Dow-Jones averages. Rails declined 0.97 point, to 26.27 and utilities lost 0.74 point, to 22.43. The main selling was in the heavy industries shares. Lack of any encouraging news, either business or political, rather than anything of a particularly disquieting nature appears to have been back of the market's action. Some hope was had of real relief for business, but what relief is in sight, following the recent Washington conference, is clouded by the statements indicating further large spending programs, larger outlays for agriculture even more than were provided for in the budget and suggestions that any reduction in taxes in one place would be made up somewhere else. In addition the declining rate of steel production and the coal shutdown with its effect on industry and freight carloadings has not helped to brighten the outlook.

Furthermore, comes the news from Washington that "influential New Deal and administration advisers count on the temporary economic committee's current study of savings and investment, which got under way yesterday, to provide the 'build up' for a new spending program." The President's views, as expressed in a letter to Senator O'Mahoney, chairman of the committee, were found "encouraging" by the Dealers who vision a new "pump priming" drive in a revised form.

Carloadings are estimated to have dropped last week to around 555,000 cars, from 572,857 the week before. Resumption of soft coal mining will raise the total for the present week.

President Holman told stockholders of Creole Petroleum that earnings so far this year have been 20 to 25 per cent under last year.

Erie Railroad reported April gross of $6,078,115 against $5,323,643 in the 1938 month.

A Stock Exchange seat sold at $63,000, up $3,000 from the last previous sale.

Commodities were irregular Tuesday, with the Dow-Jones futures index showing a decline of 0.17 point. Cotton futures were unchanged, to 12.00 cents. Spot May cotton closed at 9.25 cents a pound, up 22 points. Prices in Worth street continued firm. Wheat futures were erratic, with the trend downward. Rubber, silk and cocoa were relatively steady; hides and sugar were lower. Silk futures were higher, with June contracts at $2.57 a pound.

President Gilman of Packard Motors reports an immediate upturn in both factory and retail sales since reductions announced May 1 of from $100 to $300 on its cars. Retail deliveries of 2,102 units the first ten days of May were the highest for a first ten days period since November, 1937. Ford V-8 sales for the first ten days of May were 49 per cent above the same period in 1938 and largest for any comparable period since September 1937. Buick reported sales for the period up 55 per cent over last year. Meanwhile reports show that domestic sales of cars and trucks held comparatively steady in April, with the decline from March peak less than had been expected.

Niles-Bement-Pond Co. declared a dividend of one share of United Aircraft Corp. stock for each 20 shares of its own stock held, in a move to conserve cash. Kennecott Copper declared dividend of 15 cents on common; Public Service of N. J. 60 cents; Kimberly Clark 25 cents and an extra 25 cents; C. & O. Railway declared 50 cents on common and regular quarterly of $1 on 4 per cent preferred. Newmont Mining and Libby-Owens-Ford each voted 50 cents.

International Paper & Power, shows net profit, subject to adjustment, for the first quarter, amounting to $12,428, which compares with net loss a year ago of $124,935.

Forsts Take Game

Forsts won their third successive game Tuesday night at Loughran Park, defeating the N. Y. A. S. L. "Pepper" Norton, star hurler of the Packers, gave only five hits. The fine defensive work around second base by "Anchor" Smith was a great help for the Packers.

New York, May 17 (AP)—Slow but persistent selling depressed stock prices today.

Leading issues were a point or more near the final hour and trading, never active during the session, became even thinner. Transfers were at the rate of about 600,000 shares.

The London brokers' decision not to quote American securities came as a surprise to Wall Street, although this step to curb the flow of capital to America was understood merely to mean orders in American issues would not be solicited.

U. S. Treasury bonds continued their rise, but corporate loans followed the downward trend. Commodities were slightly weaker. Lower stocks included Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Rubber, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, Union Carbide, Douglas, Martin, Sperry, Standard Oil of N. J., and American Telephone.

Curb quotations were generally lower, declines being recorded for Aluminum Company, American Cyanamid B, Cuneo Press, Mead Johnson, Newmont Mining, and National Steel Car.

The closings in Europe's leading markets were uneven with small dealings.

British Rulers Land at Quebec

burned along the great waterway and bells pealed in welcome from the riverside village churches.

At the sight of the moving lights of the liner and her company, persons along the shore called out, "Vive Le Roi!... Vive La Reine!... Long live the King!... Long live the Queen!"

It was reported from the Empress of Australia that Their Majesties enjoyed thoroughly their last full day aboard ship. They spent more time on deck than on any other day.

Canadian naval craft in Quebec harbor were ordered to fire 21 guns in salute as the liner eased into Wolfe's Cove today.

Today's program called for a brief welcome aboard ship from Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, followed by a great ceremony a few minutes later when Their Majesties had come ashore. Specially built automobiles waited with a guard of honor to carry the royal party up the winding cliff road to the legislative halls, for another reception.

Broadest facilities were arranged for a luncheon speech by the king at Chateau Frontenac. A state procession through the city to the Plains of Abraham where Wolfe won Canada for Great Britain 180 years ago, tea at the residence of the lieutenant-governor of Quebec province and dinner at Chateau Frontenac were the other high spots of the day.

Tomorrow morning the royal party will be up early to entrain for Three Rivers and Montreal in a tour across the continent and back, and into the United States at Niagara Falls June 8.

Health Film Aids Pneumonia Drive

The motion picture "Serum to Winham" currently being shown at the Broadway Theatre is considered an important part of New York State's newest health drive—that against pneumonia. Dr. J. S. Ingraham, state health officer of this district, said today:

"I want to emphasize," said Dr. Ingraham, "that 'Serum to Winham' is an official production of the State of New York and is being distributed as a part of a determined battle of science against one of man's worst enemies, pneumonia. In giving an opportunity for the spread of the picture's important scientific message, theatre operators and managers are co-operating with the State Department of Health to alleviate physical suffering and save lives in New York state."

"Serum to Winham" is a true story based on an actual happening in the Catskill Mountains where a youth was stricken with a rare type of pneumonia. Realizing the importance of prompt diagnosis and treatment, a country doctor set emergency wheels in motion. Laboratory, New York City police, railroad workers, state troopers and others participated in getting the serum to Winham in time to save the youth's life. Billboards, snow drifts, and sub-zero weather faced the men delivering the serum.

Market Dropped in Tuesday's Trading

The market moved decisively downward yesterday as trading stepped up a bit in volume, total being 620,000 shares. Stocks opened below Monday's closing prices and slid steadily down during the day. At the close industrial issues showed a loss of 2.79 points, to 129.86 in the Dow-Jones averages. Rails declined 0.97 point, to 26.27 and utilities lost 0.74 point, to 22.43. The main selling was in the heavy industrial shares. Lack of any encouraging news, either business or political, rather than anything of a particularly disquieting nature appears to have been back of the market's action. Some hope was had of real tax relief for business, but what relief is in sight, following the recent Washington conference, is clouded by the statements indicating further large spending programs, larger outlays for agriculture even more than were provided for in the budget and suggestions that any reduction in taxes in one place would be made up somewhere else. In addition the declining rate of steel production and the coal shutdown with its effect on industry and freight carloadings has not helped to brighten the outlook.

Furthermore, comes the news from Washington that "influential advisers count on the temporary economic committee's current study of savings and investment, which got under way yesterday, to provide the 'build up' for a new spending program." The President's views, as expressed in a letter to Senator O'Mahoney, chairman of the committee, were found "encouraging" by New Dealers who vision a new "pump priming" drive in a revised form.

Carloadings are estimated to have dropped last week to around 553,000 cars, from 572,857 the week before. Resumption of soft coal mining will raise the total for the present week.

President Holman told stockholders of Croile Petroleum that earnings so far this year have been 20 to 25 per cent under last year.

Erie Railroad reported April gross of $6,076,115 as against $5,323,643 in the 1938 month.

A Stock Exchange seat sold at $65,000, up $3,000 from the last previous sale.

Commodities were irregular Tuesday, with the Dow-Jones futures index showing a decline of 0.17 point. Cotton futures were unchanged to up 12 points. Spot May cotton closed at 9.25 cents a pound, up 22 points. Prices in North street continued firm. Wheat futures were erratic, with the trend downward. Rubber, silk and cocoa were relatively steady; hides and sugar were lower. Silk futures were higher, with June contracts at $2.57 a pound.

President Gilman of Packard Motors reports an immediate upturn in both factory and retail sales since reductions announced May 1 of from $100 to $300 on its cars. Retail deliveries of 2,402 units the first ten days of May were the highest for a first ten days period since November, 1937. Ford V-8 sales for the first ten days of May were 49 per cent above the same period in 1938 and largest for any comparable period since September 1937. Buick reported sales for the period up 55 per cent over last year. Meanwhile reports show that domestic sales of cars and trucks held comparatively steady in April, with the decline from March peak less than had been expected.

Niles-Bement-Pond Co. declared a dividend of one share of United Aircraft Corp. stock for each 20 shares of its own stock held, in a move to conserve cash. Kennecott Copper declared dividend of 25 cents on common; Public Service of N. J. 60 cents; Kimberly Clark 25 cents and an extra of 25 cents. C. & O. Railway declared 50 cents on common and regular quarterly of $1 on 4 per cent preferred. Newmont Mining and Libby-Owens-Ford each voted 50 cents.

International Paper & Power, showing net profit, subject to adjustment, for the first quarter, amounting to $12,428, which compares with net loss a year ago of $124,935.

British Rulers Land at Quebec

burned along the great waterway and bells pealed in welcome from the riverside village churches.

At the sight of the moving lights of the liner and her convoy, persons along the shore called out, "Vive Le Roi... Vive La Reine!" "Long live the King!" "Long live the Queen!"

It was reported from the Empress of Australia that their Majesties enjoyed thoroughly their last full day aboard ship. They spent more time on deck than on any other day.

Canadian naval craft in Quebec harbor were ordered to fire 21 guns in salute as the liner eased into Wolfe's Cove today.

Today's program called for a brief welcome aboard ship from Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, followed by a great coronation a few minutes later when their Majesties had come ashore.

Specially built automobiles waited with a guard of honor to carry the royal party up the winding cliff road to the legislative halls, for another reception.

Broadcast facilities were arranged for a luncheon speech by the king at Chateau Frontenac. A state procession through the city to the Plains of Abraham where Wolfe won Canada for Great Britain 180 years ago, tea at the residence of the lieutenant-governor of Quebec province and dinner at Chateau Frontenac were the other high spots of the day.

Tomorrow morning the royal party will be up early to entrain for Three Rivers and Montreal in a tour across the continent and back, and into the United States at Niagara Falls June 8.

Dutchess Report Asks That Carroll Resign His Post

A probe conducted by a Dutchess county supervisory committee resulted in a report of that group made public yesterday asking the resignation of Hiram C. Carroll, former sheriff and now undersheriff.

The report, in effect, ordered that the resignation of Carroll be requested and accepted for the good of the service, and recommended a drastic reorganization of the office in general.

If the report as drafted by the committee is accepted and carried out it will mean the dropping of 184 deputies and the retaining of only 35 in the service of the sheriff's office. The committee assigned to the investigation also suggested a change in the highway patrol system of the sheriff's office recommending that this be left largely to the state police.

A list of 22 recommendations were included in the report of the committee which was headed by Leonard J. Supple, lawyer, chairman of Fishkill, New York, keeping and inventory systems were suggested and a more stringent checking system over the office officials.

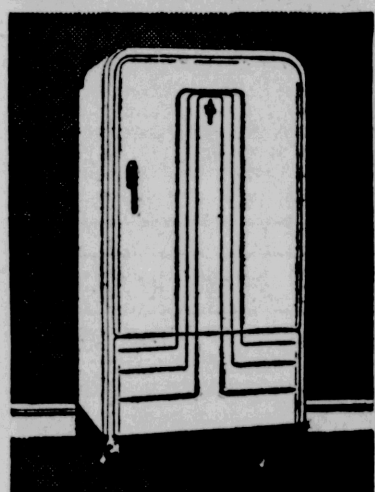

In making reference to implication of sheriff's officials in a recent alleged illicit operation of a still, the report stated: "Your committee considers the still situation, insofar as disclosed by the evidence adduced before the committee, to be so serious a reflection upon the efficient operation of the sheriff's office as organized at that time, as to require the recommendation that for the good of the service, the resignation of present Undersheriff Carroll be requested and accepted."

SHOKAN

Shokan, May 16—Mrs. Thomas Matland is again at her home on the middle boulevard after having spent several weeks in New York.

Members of the Mt. Tremper rural cemetery association held their annual meeting in Winchell's Hall Sunday afternoon. Out of town residents attending the meeting included Mr. and Mrs. Frank Van Etten, of Port Ewen and Mrs. John Van Kleeck, of Kingston. Mrs. Nettie Jones is secretary of the association.

Mr. and Mrs. John Haggerty have removed from Brown's Station to Kingston.

Reservoir fishermen are having good luck with bullheads and rock bass in the east basin of the Ashokan. Walter Capuzzo made a first rate catch of bullheads near West Hurley, while others have found fishing satisfactory in the vicinity of the spillway cove.

Homer Markel, Jr., is repainting the exterior of the Chester Lyons store building at Ashokan.

Kenneth Olson and Miss Shirley Olson motored here from Brooklyn and spent the week-end with their mother and sister, at the Olson camp, north of the village. Kenneth is employed with the Western Electric company in New Jersey.

Charles Tyler of the north boulevard is now employed on building construction job at Woodstock.

May 15, 1900, the annual convention of the Olive town Sunday school association took place at Shokan. The devotional exercises were led by Hugh Donohue of Krumville. Martin Coons, superintendent of the Brown's Station school, reported that through the industry and zeal of the Rev. R. N. Toms, his school had prospered and now had 60 scholars and 17 officers. Parr Harlow of Shokan was elected president of the association.

Ed. Leyder has invested in a 1700 pound grey horse for use around his place. The west basin of the reservoir is full to overflowing, despite the dry spell of weather. The flow-line of the east basin is a foot or so below normal. Water was released into the Esopus Creek through the Shandaken tunnel last week. The aerator is still inactive, pending completion of repairs to the concrete work of the basin.

Donald Every, son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Every, has married a Florida girl and is now associated with his father in the contracting business in Daytona.

A social and card party will be given in the Reformed Church basement Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the church.

Mrs. Jane Stubby has returned to her state road place after having been with relatives in New York for the past several months.

Members of the Doctor Rittner family of New Jersey, were in Shokan Sunday. The Rittners have a summer place near Atwood.

Francis J. Waters, Jr., well known Kingston horseman, called on friends in the village center Sunday afternoon.

The upper Esopus Creek appears to be increasingly popular with trout fishermen. The creek has been lined with sportsmen and some excellent catches of brown trout have been made between Boiceville and Shandaken. The reservoir shore line is well dotted with casters, both during the daytime and far into the night. No boats were to be seen Sunday though the number will probably average around 20 later in the season.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
 Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
 Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaford.

Yesterday, Jocelyn's Nola seems attracted to Tally, and tells him he has a late degree. Lyn decides to show up Tally's crudity by inviting him to a Country Club dance.

Chapter 15

May I Cut In?

NOLA closed the door of the ladies' lounge, made sure no one else was inside, and said to Jocelyn: "I wonder why Tally wouldn't come over with us?"

"Maybe he has a sick cow. Anyhow, Bob said he promised to put in an appearance."

"Why isn't Bob coming?"

"Oh, he made some sort of vague excuse. Truthfully, Nola, he's seeing far too much of that Mack girl. He's infatuated with her and I'm worried. Bob—well, he isn't like the rest of us. He might do something foolish."

"Such as?" Nola urged.

"Well—what if he married her?"

"What if he did?" Nola shrugged, powdering her nose and drawing a crimson lipstick across her amused mouth. "She would probably make him an excellent wife."

"Nola, you're absolutely hopeless!"

"I think it is you who are hopeless," the other girl said quietly. "Social snobbery is not a pleasant affliction. Lyn, can't you like people just for themselves?"

Jocelyn paused in the process of smoothing down a stray curl of rich auburn hair. Her face was thoughtful.

"Am I as bad as all that, Nola?"

"I wonder. You didn't used to be—at least not consciously or obviously. I think these Texans have put your back up. You resent what they've done to Seaford and so you retreat into horrible snobbery. Real people don't do that, Lyn. They don't have to. I could mix with any sort of people and enjoy myself. If I fell in love with my chauffeur or my gardener I'd marry him. I would still be Nola Cranston, but I would also have had the courage to live my life as I wished. Darling, it's only the stuff and proper bourgeoisie who allow themselves to be constricted by class and convention; who fear the censure of their relatives and neighbors. I can afford to be natural and human. So can you. So can anyone if he has the least bit of common sense."

Lyn digested this while she slipped into place the full, swirling skirt of her white taffeta gown and pinned more securely to her shoulder the pale green orchids Geoff had sent.

"I just can't like the Mack family, Nola," she finally said. "Whether it's snobbery or not—they don't belong at Seaford and I don't want anything to do with them."

"Have you tried to like them?" Nola demanded.

"No. And I don't intend to."

"Well, I have. And I learned a lot. They've been kicked around like footballs by depression and poverty and they've come out of it with their chins up, thanks to young Talbot. He gave up his chance for a career to take care of his family—and he might have had one, for he's smart and not afraid of work. His family worships him and I don't blame them. He's loyal and dependable and any girl that gets him for a husband will be darned lucky! Did you ever stop to wonder how you and I and people like us would react to the loss of our money and property? Would we whine or would we fight?"

"Oh, stop it, Nola!" Lyn said crossly. "I'm so sick of hearing eulogies about the Mack family that I wish I were in Alaska! Let's go out and dance."

Introductions

NOLA gave her sleek, velvet-sheathed image one last glance of approval and followed Lyn out to the dance floor where Geoff and Thorndyke waited impatiently.

As Geoff danced her the length of the floor, Jocelyn answered his gay greetings with her friends, only half-listening to Geoff's elaborate diagnosis of the new pony's ailment. Finally, looking down at her abstracted eyes, he accused petulantly. "You aren't even listening to me, Lyn! If I bore you so terribly perhaps you'd like to finish the dance with someone else."

He felt her startled movement and followed her glance toward the entrance where a tall young man in immaculate evening clothes stood surveying the dancers with bold black eyes, a half smile on his mouth.

"It is Tally—Tally!" Jocelyn gasped. "He's coming toward us—he's going to cut in!"

"Who invited him?" Geoff blustered. "I'll have him thrown out!"

"I invited him. Don't you dare make a scene, Geoff! Kensing!"

Then Tally was next to them, smiling down at Jocelyn as if they were the best of friends. "May I cut in?"

Feeling as if all volition had left her, she went into his arms; felt them tighten about her slender figure and guide her into smooth steps. He could dance. And well. She relaxed a trifle and dared peek upwards. He appeared perfectly composed and at ease. He did not look out of place or strange. He might be any one of the young men in the club set.

Other couples passing them stared curiously. Tally said: "Disappointed because I didn't wear my overalls and boots?" To save her life she could not have answered one word. Relief swept her as the dance ended and he took her over to Geoffrey. Meeting Geoff's eyes squarely he held out his hand, saying, "We haven't met. Mr. Kensing; I'm Talbot Mack."

Geoffrey extended a limp, unwilling hand, appraising young Mack with hostile eyes as their hands clasped briefly. Then Nola sauntered up and greeted Tally with a warmth that froze Thorn's frown on his face.

"I'm so glad you've come," she smiled, her eyes twinkling as she noted the growing circle about them. "I can't tell you how pleased I was when Jocelyn told me she had insisted on your being with us tonight. Has she introduced you to everyone? No?" Nola turned to Lyn who was palpably bewildered and annoyed. "Lyn, darling introduce your guests of the evening? We want to know everyone, don't we, Tally?"

Jocelyn, her chin set stubbornly, took Nola and Tally on a round of the ballroom, her blue eyes becoming stormier with each introduction she performed.

Ruth Benton smiled archly. "What's the idea of holding out on the rest of us?" she asked. "You can expect plenty of female visitors from now on!"

Most of Lyn's girl friends made similar remarks.

Jocelyn felt she had reached the bursting point when Eleanor Livingston invited Tally to a party the following afternoon.

"I'm afraid Mr. Mack will have to disappoint you," she said, striving for control. "He has cows and chickens and a truck garden to look after."

"Yes," he agreed with imperturbable good humor. "I happen to be a farmer, Miss Livingston."

Mocking

"WHY, that's marvelous!" Eleanor nor cooed. "I had no idea you were the young man from Texas."

A blast from the orchestra halted conversation. Without asking permission, Tally drew Jocelyn into his arms and danced her out on the floor. Geoffrey, a vexed expression on his usually mild face, cut in. Over his shoulder Jocelyn watched Tally find Nola and sweep her, laughing, into the dance. There was a resentful twinge in the region of Lyn's heart.

Geoff blurted, "Just what is the idea of asking him here?"

"Because I wanted to."

"But why? You said you couldn't bear him."

"I can't."

"Then why on earth..."

"You don't understand women, Geoff."

"I guess I don't! I guess no man does."

"I think," mused Jocelyn, "there is one man who understands them far too well." A little laugh of self-derision escaped her. Tally had known very well just why he had been invited. Once again he had thwarted her.

Geoffrey, preoccupied, missed a step and trod on her small green slippers.

"Hadin't you better call the veterinary and have them see you?" she suggested. "You certainly haven't your mind on dancing."

His eyes were uneasy. "Come outside with me, Lyn. I want to talk to you."

In the semi-darkness of a porch corner he lifted her chin with his finger-tips. "You do love me, don't you, Lyn? I've never questioned it before, but now—"

"Then why now?" she asked lightly, absorbing all the dear familiarity of him. This was the man she wanted for life. Substantially dependable; her own kind of person. He would make a dutiful husband and—and a fine father for their children. He was good to look at, too. He had a nice firm face; clear fair skin; pleasant hazel eyes; and—

"Of course I love you, Geoff," she declared.

He appeared satisfied. His lips brushed her forehead. "I know our love affair has never been one of those wild, reckless things you read about in books and see in movies," he said; "but that sort of thing isn't real, anyhow. We aren't that kind of people, are we, Lyn? We are restrained, well-bred, intelligent persons who plan our lives with our heads instead of our emotions. That's why our marriage will be a success while these others will be failures. Look at the example your grandmother set—"

"Yes," Lyn thought. "I have. She spent her entire life wishing she had married another man! Is this quiet, friendly feeling I have for Geoff really love? Is it all I will ever feel? Or will marriage make a difference?"

"You're shivering, dear," he broke in on her disturbing thoughts. "Let me take you inside."

The evening went merrily on for everyone but Jocelyn; or so she told herself. As for matter with her dancing partner was Tally constantly and consistently cut in. He pursued her ardently; he smiled into her eyes; he clung to her hands when the music stopped. He behaved, to all appearances, as a man completely enthralled with a girl.

"Yet he isn't!" Jocelyn thought, hotly resentful. "Beneath it all he's mocking me, laughing at me, enjoying the way everyone is talking about us!"

Continued tomorrow.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Time Out
Painesville, D.—The larceny trial of Frank Grabowski, 42, was continued until June 12 because—
During a court recess, Mrs. Forrest Pinney, a juror, went home and became the mother of twins.

Blue and Gray
Joplin, Mo.—G. A. R. veterans rose indignantly when they discovered a "rebel" at their state encampment.

He was Andrew Hawkins, 90-year-old Confederate veteran, who said he figured the war was over and it was time to let bygones be bygones.

The Union veterans agreed but maintained a G. A. R. encampment was no place for him.

Factual Report
Beatrice, Neb.—The headline read, "Local boy weeds on coast; Arlington Brugh, reported doing well in dramatics, weds Ruby Stevens."

That was the way the Beatrice Sun told its readers of the marriage of Beatrice's high school's best known graduate.

Arlington Brugh is Robert Taylor of the movies; Ruby Stevens is Barbara Stanwyck of the movies.

Hopes to Settle
Buffalo (AP)—After she has attended 100 schools, June Handke, 15, hopes to "settle down," she says. SOUTH AMERICAN GOOD SENSE

Alarm lest Latin-America adopt the totalitarian ideas of the Old World should be lessened by reports of American observers who have traveled there lately. One newspaper writer says she found much sympathy for the peoples of Europe, but it was not accompanied by enthusiasm for their governments.

It is true, she says, that German trade is increasing down there, but it is cutting into French and British trade rather than ours. We could make large trade gains ourselves if we would find more reasonable methods of putting our goods on sale.

In Guatemala this traveler talked with Rafael Arevalo Martinez, a man who has headed that country's national liberty for twelve years, an author and a believer in democracy.

"We back the United States," he said, "because we guard our freedom. We oppose the new European theories, and we will not follow the Nazis because we are profiting by their example. We do not want to lose our spiritual freedom."

"We are willing to follow the United States because that is our protection. We have complete confidence in the good neighbor policy. The spiritual and material veins of our countries should blend together; spiritually there should be mutual confidence, hope and trust, materially we should open our trade markets. The time is coming when we will be more one unit than we are now."

If these views are at all common among leaders in the other American republics, then common sense and friendly cooperation on our part will easily ward off the threats from Europe.

FRENCH BIKE-RIDERS

France has more roads in proportion to its area than any other country in Europe, and it's possible that there are more bicycles on those roads than anywhere else in the world. One out of every six of the population owns a bicycle.

Low-priced automobiles, good bus service and special rates on railroads fail to shake the popular delight in bicycling, although the railroads have found bicycle trains profitable. Riders use the trains to transport themselves and their bikes to some far corner of France where they can spend a day, or a week-end or a vacation peddling along the country highways.

Bicyclers are more numerous in Paris than they are in our cities. Apparently, too, they are not subject to the safety regulations now being applied in many communities here. Alarmed American observers say that groups of as many as twenty people on wheels weave their way through traffic with amazing unconcern and that motorists, for some reason, do not honk them off the streets or run over them.

The bicycle seems to be international, whether it is used by travelers who want an intimate and leisurely view of a foreign land or by natives who find it an easy and inexpensive way to get their recreation and exercise. Distinctions in racial pleasures and practices do not extend to this vehicle.

PET PIG

It has been often said that pigs are cleanly animals when they have a chance to be, but few people believe it. Pigs are traditionally "dirty," and that is supposed to settle the question. But it doesn't. Here is the case of Alice, a little pig who lives with a human family in a pleasant brick farmhouse, on a beautiful country estate near Painesville, Ohio.

Alice was born along with fourteen other piglets early this spring. Fifteen children are too many even for a maternal pig to feed. So Mrs. Martha Taylor, the farmer's wife, took Alice into the house and fed her first with a medicine dropper, then from a regular child's nursing bottle. Naturally Alice got used to the house. She mostly occupies the kitchen, but rambles around, upstairs and downstairs at her own free will, just like other children.

And is that child clean? "Alice always looks as if she were just out of her bath," reports an astonished newspaper man. "Of course she is house-broke. She squeals to be let out, and squeals at the door to be admitted." She even goes occasionally into the parlor of the Big House on the estate, in the company of the owner's delighted children, and seems to love the fine rugs and furniture.

POPULAR GOLF

If this country is spending $500,000,000 a year on golf, as a sport statistician figures, we can't be so hard up as many of us have been thinking. Even if the estimate includes the cost of the country clubs, it's quite a bit of money to spend on one sport, supposedly rather limited.

But golf spreads widely nowadays. There are said to be 3,500,000 golfers in the United States. Some of them pay $5,000 a year for knocking the little ball around and experiencing the various satisfactions connected therewith. The average golfer is said to get along on $140 a year. Even that is quite a bit of money to most Americans nowadays. Averaged through the year, it would be nearly $3 a week. It might average that much, or more, per game played. Baseball is cheaper.

Golf can be played, however, on public courses, for about 25 cents a game. That's getting, in spirit, much nearer the primitive "shinney" from which golf probably developed. And the 25-center may get as much fun out of it as the millionaire country-club member.

ONE-SIDED MEDIATION

The recent announcement that Japan, after consultation with Italy, had offered to mediate the dispute between Germany and Poland, was another interesting example of how dictators' minds work.

Japan has been for some time a member of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis. Her proposal is an entertaining reminder of occasions on which Mussolini has generously offered to mediate disputes started by Hitler, in his campaigns of aggression against non-dictatorship nations.

It would be a very pleasant world for the totalitarians if Rome, Berlin and Tokyo could take turns arbitrating each other's efforts to grab other people's rights and territories. And it did seem to work that way for a while, notably at Munich. But lately the threatened nations are getting so suspicious about such friendly services that the predatory allies find it hard to do business with them.

Political action has very little to do with political economy.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act. REMOVING SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

One of the distressing ailments that often causes an inferiority complex and may lead to actual mental trouble is superfluous hair. A girl or woman with an otherwise clear complexion may have a light growth of hair on her lip, and if she is a brunette, this hair is very noticeable. Superfluous hair may occur anywhere on the body.

For years dermatologists have advised patients to undergo electrolysis by which the electric current destroys or removes these hairs one at a time. Unfortunately, the results obtained by some patients have been disappointing in that they have lost time and money and in a number of cases their appearance is worse than before undergoing treatment. These results are usually due to the operator lacking the proper skill.

In an endeavor to show that electrolysis is still the best form of treatment and to prevent the disappointment to many of these individuals, Dr. Anthony C. Cipollaro, New York, in The Journal of the American Medical Association says: "Electrolysis is far from being a safe procedure in unskilled hands. Carelessness and ignorance applied to electrolysis may cause injuries to the skin which are objectionable, disfiguring, painful, and even, at times, dangerous."

On the other hand, electrolysis is the only method for permanent and safe removal of unwanted hairs on various parts of the body. After outlining the type of apparatus to use, the method of preparing the skin to remove fat or other substances, the method of inserting the "electric needle" to the full depth of the follicle or hair canal, the strength of the current and the length of time the needle is left in the follicle before hair is removed by the special forceps, the following advice is given:

1. Hairs should not be removed from inflamed areas.
2. A test treatment should be given to learn how much the skin (of other parts of the body) can stand.
3. One should always use the smallest amount of current that will effectively and permanently remove hair. A mild current suffices for upper lip.
4. A hair adjoining one that is being removed should not be removed at the same time as this may cause inflammation.
5. Needle should not be left in follicle longer than is absolutely necessary.
6. Only about three or four hairs are removed from an area about the size of a dime.

Treatments last about thirty minutes and are given once a week.

Stamps In The News

By The (P) Feature Service

Perhaps the most striking and attractive set of stamps to be issued this year has just been released by Rumania. The set, in 14 values, commemorates the founding of Rumania's dynasty, 1000 years ago.

This largest—and richest—Balkan state did not come into existence until 1859. Thus its postal authorities apparently are calculating the beginning of the dynasty from the birth of its founder in 1339.

Rumania was formed from two Turkish principalities that were under Russian protection—Moldavia and Wallachia. These two areas were united in 1861 under Prince Alexander Cuza. His well-meaning, but ruthless reforms brought his downfall and Prince Carol (or Charles) of the Hohenzollern line was elected. Carol was the first of the present dynasty.

In 1878, Rumania's sovereign independence finally was recognized and Carol was proclaimed king. Rumania's present king is young, romantic Carol II who lost his claim to the throne for several years because of a divorce but was recalled to the throne in 1930.

The stamps are remarkable for their richness of color and for their clearness. The one illustrated on the left is the 7-lei value in dark brown showing a statue of the first king on a horse. The other is the 12-lei value which shows a portrait of the king. Perforation of all the stamps is 14.

Would Honor Composer

If several of America's outstanding musicians have their way, a stamp honoring the memory of the famed composer, George Foster, soon will be issued.

Andre Kostelanetz, noted orchestra leader acting as chairman of a committee which included such famed musical figures as Lawrence Tibbett, baritone, and Deems Taylor, music commentator—got Congressman Lex Green of Florida to introduce a bill requesting the issuance of such a stamp.

Insults Removed

lay at the feet of Poland's king and queen.

Because of intense bitterness created, the stamp was hurriedly withdrawn and revised. The helmet and sword—signs of German humiliation—do not appear on the new stamp, which is shown at the right. The original stamp's price soared from a few cents to 75 cents almost immediately after it was withdrawn.

In a campaign to promote reforestation and forest fire prevention, special railway cars equipped with cinema theatres were used at lectures conducted throughout Canada in 1938 by the Canadian Forestry Association.

Tax Revision May Become the Prevailing Issue Inside and Outside the Democratic Party

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, May 17.—History repeats itself every now and then in American politics, and this time the issue is tax revision and the split in one of the major parties comes on the eve of a presidential election.

Back in 1911, the Republican party in Congress split on the tariff and cost of living issues, and the insurgent point of view of the Republicans was a factor in giving the election to the opposite party in 1912. Today, the Democratic party is either going to be split on tax revision and the issue carried into the presidential campaign, with a probability that the opposite party will win, or else the Democrats are going to be astute enough to avoid the mistakes of insurgency and keep their party reconciled.

But it does look more like a split than a harmonious relationship. The reason is that the New Dealers, after a remarkable period of understanding of the public pulse, now disbelieve that the 1938 Congressional elections really meant anything national and want to let the 1940 election contest decide.

Tax revision is not what the New Deal folks think it is as a political issue. They assume that it is merely the cry of a few rich men or plutocratic interests for a reduction in taxes. If this were so, it would be an easy matter to turn on the streams of denunciation and invective and trust to the electorate to echo their charges. But tax revision has become identified with economic recovery. Little business, big business, workers in the middle class, farmers and others in the electorate who can read have been told again and again these last three years that business recovery cannot be achieved until the tax load on general business is reduced.

By every available evidence, including the frequent showings of the Gallup poll, the American electorate has begun to take seriously the demand for a revision of taxes. The administration's only answer, namely that taxes cannot be cut unless revenues from other sources increase or else unless the budget itself is cut, would be very persuasive if offered on a background of retrenchment by the administration itself or if recognition had been continuously given to the ills of business in some sort of comprehensive program.

But, rightly or wrongly, the administration is being pictured before the country as the sadistic enemy of business and the New Deal's inner circle is being represented as truly anxious to bring on a state of affairs in which more rather than less governmental regulation will become necessary.

One does not need for a moment to accept as valid the imputations of destructiveness of the punitive spirit said by their critics to be characteristic of New Dealers to see that there is inside congress a definite cleavage as between independent Democrats and administration Democrats. The differences between them are neither accidental nor casual. They are deeply rooted in a point of view. Most of the administration Democrats are following without complaint the leadership of the President, while the independents are insisting that the President's leadership is not in conformity with public opinion today or in the best interests of the party.

Mr. Roosevelt feels that, in the past, he has been a pretty good judge of public opinion and that he has not been wrong about the liberal impulses of the American people, and that they will not want him to change his course if to do so means to give up the reforms he has been putting into effect.

On fiscal policy, however, and especially on taxation, it is not easy to draw a liberal-conservative issue, for nobody likes taxes, and when the public debt rises to forbidding heights, it is no longer possible from a political point of view to offer a convincing defense.

Time always works against the administration in power, and with the prospect that eight years will have passed without a balanced budget and that during those eight years the United States had not been rid of unemployment, the average American will be asked to indicate whether it isn't time to try a change of administration.

The pendulum has always swung the other way in the past when depression has prevailed during an election year. In 1936, a relative amount of recovery had been achieved and the country had an optimistic mood about the future. Today, disappointment over the failure of the unemployed to find jobs, the increase each year of more young men who join the ranks of the unemployed, the constant outcries of business men against the taxes they are paying and which they say are deterring economic recovery—all contribute to a negative mood on the part of voters. This is why Senator Pat Harrison, chairman of the Senate finance committee, feels that, in differing with the President, he is making a desperate attempt to save the Democratic party from defeat.

The insurgency of the western Republicans in 1911 and early 1912 was not needed by the leaders of the regular faction of the Republican party. It begins to look as though, rather than agree with the insurgent Democrats, the administration and the regular Democratic leaders today are going to try for a showdown in the 1940 campaign. The tax revision problem may become the prevailing issue inside and outside the Democratic party in the next 17 months before the 1940 elections.

Official $15,000 Estimate Won't Cover Nerve Strain

By BETH CAMPBELL
Washington, May 17 (AP)—The visit of the British king and queen will cost the United States government about $15,000 by semi-official estimate, but many a matron agreed today that capital society will pay a price not measurable in dollars and cents.

The $15,000 total was arrived at by a state department official, who figured in such items as rental of a special train, a luncheon and state dinner at the White House, and a yacht trip to Mount Vernon.

Rep. Sweeney (D-Ohio), on the other hand, told the House yesterday the entertainment would cost $300,000. He included, among other things, the loss of time by government employees who may be allowed to witness the royal parade June 8.

The biggest cost to society women won't be new dresses for the garden party at the British embassy, but hours of nerve strain and indecision over problems of royal etiquette.

"You Can't Do That!"

If a woman hints that she will curtsy to the king and queen, her best friend may tell her it is un-American. If she says she won't, somebody invariably comments that it wouldn't hurt to show visiting monarchs the courtesies to which they are accustomed.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday that she imagined women from the British embassy would curtsy, but that she didn't believe Americans were supposed to do so. She herself, on the advice of the state department, will shake hands with their Majesties when she greets them.

Lady Lindsay, American-born wife of the British ambassador, has said that if American women curtsy, it will be regarded as a courtesy. But she emphasized that the decision is a personal one.

Asked whether it would be amiss to shake hands with the king and queen, Lady Lindsay said it would depend on whether they extended their hands.

How to Get Away

The question of backing away from the king and queen probably will not come up, she indicated, since they always precede anyone else from a room. Whenever they are with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the honor guests will leave first.

Other angles of royal etiquette attracted capital attention when Mrs. Roosevelt disclosed yesterday that she has received memoranda from "various people abroad" regarding the comfort of the British royal couple at the White House.

She has been advised, she said, that the queen likes a linen blanket on her settee, but the first lady is not sure she knows what a linen blanket is.

The memoranda included one

Police Will Be Kiwanis Guests

All members of Kingston Kiwanis are urged to be present at the meeting at noon Thursday. In order that the program may not continue beyond 1:30 o'clock President Ed Huben will start the meeting at 12 o'clock sharp. It will be the annual policemen's dinner when the Patrolmen's Association will have the program in charge. The guest speaker will be the Hon. Frederick G. Traver, county judge.

As guests of the club will be Chief of Police J. Allan Wood, officials of the association, Mayor Heiselman, police commissioners and other city officials.

There also will be three acts of vaudeville from New York city.

SHANDAKEN

Shandaken, May 16—Appropriate exercises commemorating Mother's Day were held in the M. E. Church Sunday consisting of tableaux interspersed with songs suited to the occasion. Services were held in the church hall and were well attended.

Raymond Brown, son of A. G. Brown, who is employed on the American ship Exhibitor plying between Newark and the Mediterranean was home on a furlough for a day.

Dr. J. Herbert Low of Brooklyn, who has a summer home in Shandaken Golf Club Colony, arrived here Saturday. He will remain at his place for the entire season.

The Shandaken card club will meet at the home of Mrs. Agnes Foubly Wednesday afternoon.

The Home Bureau met at the home of Mrs. F. M. Cleveland Thursday afternoon. Miss Bertha Snyder of Mt. Marion gave a talk on perennials. There was also an exchange of plants.

Mrs. Nettie Griffin, who has been spending some time in Chicago, Ill., is home with her mother, Mrs. Charles Van Valkenburg.

Mrs. Sidney Bowser and two friends of Tenafly, N. J., are at the home of Mrs. Bowser in the Shandaken Country Club Colony for a few days.

Whiskey Higher

Prices quoted in the advertisement of the firm distributing Eagle whiskey have been advanced due to the application of the state tax. Therefore purchasers will note a slight increase over the advertised prices when buying whiskey.

explaining that the queen's ladies-in-waiting will bring hot water bottles and will need to have them filled.

"A hot water bottle in June in Washington is not going to be an absolute necessity," Mrs. Roosevelt laughed.

Fire Chief Tells Of New Measure

the matter up with the various town boards in Ulster county and have them take action by adopting ordinances that will prevent "match boxes" being used as summer boarding houses. This condition not only prevailed in Ulster county, the fire chief said, but throughout the state, and this bill became a law to remedy such conditions by placing the power and authority in the various town boards.

Donors of Blood

Nelson W. Snyder brought up the question of blood donors. He said that he believed each fire department should select several of its members to have the blood typed so that in case a fellow fireman was injured and needed a blood transfusion the type of blood needed and the name of a suitable donor would be on file.

The suggestion was unanimously approved by the association, and on motion it was referred to the board of directors to take the matter up with the hospitals and laboratory to see what procedure would best be taken.

Need Volunteer Spirit

The solution of the economic and other problems confronting the world today was in the hands of the average man, said Surrogate Harry H. Flemming, guest speaker, at the meeting.

The type of average man was the volunteer, the man who would perform some service for the community without thought of remuneration. There are millions of that type of men in this country and in their hands rests the salvation of our land.

There must be a revival of the spirit of patriotism that animated our forefathers, said Surrogate Flemming, and the unselfish citizenship that has placed our country in the forefront of the world. The volunteer fireman is one of the few present day groups dominated by the same spirit of unselfish service that existed in the early days of this country.

The grave problem in the early days of the founding of our land was taxation without representation. Today, he said, taxation has become as important a question as it was then. Conditions today are rapidly becoming intolerable but even with was still a good place in which to live, he said.

With rising taxation has come rising costs of government with thousands being added to the state and federal payrolls. While thousands are being added to the government payrolls the national debt has reached staggering proportions.

Surrogate Flemming blamed the conditions that exist in this country today and in the world at large to economic conditions, but that this country with its huge natural resources was in a better condition to return to normalcy than the rest of the world.

The guest speaker was introduced by Mayor C. J. Heiselman. Chairman Jack Heaney urged the fire departments to be well represented at the Ulster County Day on Sunday, June 4, at the State Firemen's Home at Hudson.

The board of directors reported that Lake Katrine and Bloomingville were considering the formation of volunteer fire companies.

The June meeting will be held in Woodstock on the second Tuesday of the month, while the annual convention and parade will be held in Wallkill July 14 and 15.

Francis J. Wynne, secretary of the association, was elected delegate to the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association convention in Catskill in June.

The delegates also named President Adam Ulrich of Wallkill to represent the association at the testimonial dinner to be tendered Judge Joseph M. Fowler in honor of his many years of active service in health work in Ulster county.

Following the business session which was held in the rooms of the Spring Street Lutheran Church, the delegates adjourned to the rooms of the Rapid Hose Co. nearby where refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

The Road to the DIVORCE COURT Is Paved With

CARROTS and PEAS

Remember that old song: "Monday hasenpfeffer! Tuesday string beans! Wednesday s-soo-OUP! Thursday roast beef! Friday fi-ISH?" Surest way to lose a husband is to let him know what to expect for dinner every night in the week!

"She sued a rare juicy steak for alienation of affections." You've never seen that in the papers—but don't smile, lady,—it might happen to you some day. Just go on serving carrots and peas every Thursday, come rain, snow or maid's-night-out; just persist in your potato-patty pattern every Monday and the halibut habit on Fridays—keep at it long enough—and you'll lose your man.

You may be awfully proud of the way you fix tapioca pudding—but tapioca can taste pretty flat, served too often. Even the best of foods quickly lose their savor to a hungry husband when they come at him regular as clockwork on a weekly merry-go-round. And there lies danger! For "ration routine" has ruined more marriages than the fabled mother-in-law; it has broken up more homes than the bluest-eyed chorus girl who ever crossed Times Square!

"Ration routine" is doubly dangerous because it's so insidious; your husband himself may not consciously realize what's wrong. But while he picks at his food he is probably muttering, deep in his heart, "Vicious vittles!" and dreaming of a cottage in a magical land where he can get something wonderful and different and new for dinner every night.

You pride yourself on being a wise and thrifty shopper! Do you know that it's thrifty, economical shoppers like you who are most likely to be at fault? They buy cautiously, they save money, they shun extravagance and sooner or later they fall into a food rut. Then beef stew goes on the table every Wednesday or maybe every other Wednesday, fried perch becomes a regular Friday nightmare, and that's when the trouble really begins.

Men like variety! They like to be surprised. They want food that is tempting and different even more than they want low grocery bills. To your husband dinner time is, or should be, the high point of the day. It's the pivot about which his whole home life turns, and in the interests of his love and affection you just cannot afford to trifle with his appetite—you can't afford to risk "ration routine."

Especially when the cure is so simple. Maybe you've forgotten that there are anywhere from sixty-five to ninety different kinds of vegetables and fruits, canned and fresh, in a well-stocked food store; dozens of different kinds of meats, fish, sea foods; spices galore; prepared foods by the score—every one lending itself to several delicious recipes! Maybe you've forgotten, too, that there is a cook book somewhere in your house, brimming over with ideas that are really fun to try out. Maybe you've forgotten that one of the reasons your husband married you was because he thought you'd serve him a swell dinner every night. Have you forgotten? He hasn't!

If you doubt it, try this little experiment! Let your husband do the shopping next Saturday afternoon when he has the time. Don't tell him what to buy, let the choice be his. It's ten to one he'll come home with things you would never dream of buying yourself—delicious palate-teasing items—foods that will make dinner time a real event—and they won't be hard to prepare, either!

Are you guilty of "ration routine?" If you are, you probably don't know it and you'd better watch your step before it's too late. Forget carrots and peas! Forget those insipid, inevitable, tiresome dishes that have become a habit with you and may well become a curse! Forget—for just a little while—the staples, the "standards" and the "here-we-are-agains," and step out and go to town! There are "surprises" aplenty waiting for you in your favorite food store, listed for you today in the Daily Freeman food ads—glorious, marvelous, delicious things to eat! Invest in them for your husband's sake. Resolve now to feed him handsomely and well.

Cut loose, lady, and treat yourself to some luxury buying at the grocery! Do it today—and knock his eye out with something super-delicious tonight!

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seacilly.

Yesterday: Wealthy Nola seems entranced with Tally and tells him he has a law degree. Lyn decides to show up Tally's crudity by inviting him to a Country Club dance.

Chapter 15 'May I Cut In?'

NOLA closed the door of the ladies' lounge, made sure no one else was inside, and said to Jocelyn: "I wonder why Tally wouldn't come over with us?"

"Maybe he has a sick cow. Anyhow, Bob said he promised to put in an appearance."

"What isn't Bob coming?"

"Oh, he made some sort of vague excuse. Truthfully, Nola, he's seeing far too much of that Mack girl. He's infatuated with her and I'm worried. Bob, well, he isn't like the rest of us. He might do something foolish."

"Such as?" Nola urged.

"Well, what if he married her?"

"What if he did?" Nola shrugged, powdering her nose and drawing a crimson lipstick across her amused mouth. "She would probably make him an excellent wife."

"Nola, you're absolutely hopeless!"

"I think it is you who are hopeless," the other girl said quietly. "Social snobbery is not a pleasant affliction. Lyn, can't you like people just for themselves?"

Jocelyn paused in the process of smoothing down a stray curl of rich auburn hair. Her face was thoughtful.

"Am I as bad as all that, Nola?"

"I wonder. You didn't used to be—at least not consciously or obviously. I think these Texans have put your back up. You resent what they've done to Seacilly and so you retreat into horrible snobbery. Real people don't do that, Lyn. They don't have to. I could mix with any sort of people and enjoy myself. If I fell in love with my chauffeur or my gardener I'd marry him. I would still be Nola Cranston, but I would also have had the courage to live my life as I wished. Darling, it's only the stuff and proper bourgeoisie who allow themselves to be constricted by class and convention; who fear the censure of their relatives and neighbors. I can afford to be natural and human. So can you. So can anyone if he has the least bit of common sense."

Lyn digested this while she slipped into place the full, swirling skirt of her white tulle gown and pinned more securely to her shoulder the pale green orchids Geoff had sent.

"I just can't like the Mack family, Nola," she finally said. "Whether it's snobbery or not—they don't belong at Seacilly and I don't want anything to do with them."

"Have you tried to like them?" Nola demanded.

"No. And I don't intend to."

"Well, I have. And I learned a lot. They've been kicked around like footballs by depression and poverty and they've come out of it with their chins up; thanks to young Talbot. He gave up his chance for a career in the care of his family—and he might have had one, for he's smart and not afraid of work. His family worship him and I don't blame them. He's loyal and dependable and any girl that gets him for a husband will be darned lucky! Did you ever stop to wonder how you and I and people like us would react to the loss of our money and property? Would we whine or would we fight?"

"Oh, stop it, Nola!" Lyn said crossly. "I'm sick of hearing eulogies about the Mack family that I wish I were in Alaska! Let's go out and dance."

Introductions

NOLA gave her sleek, velvet-sheathed image one last glance of approval and followed Lyn out into the dance floor where Geoff and Thordmyke waited impatiently.

As Geoff danced her the length of the floor, Jocelyn answered the gay greetings of her friends, only half-listening to Geoff's elaborate diagnosis of the new pony's ailment. Finally, looking down at her abstract eyes, he accused petulantly.

"You aren't even listening to me, Lyn! If I bore you so terribly perhaps you'd like to finish the dance with someone else."

He felt her startled movement and followed her glance toward the entrance where a tall young man in immaculate evening clothes stood surveying the dancers with bold black eyes, a half smile on his mouth.

"It is Tally," Jocelyn gasped. "He's coming toward us—he's going to cut in!"

"Who invited him?" Geoff blustered. "I'll have him thrown out!"

"I invited him. Don't you dare make a scene, Geoff Kensing!"

Then Tally was next to them, smiling down at Jocelyn as if they were the best of friends. "May I cut in?"

Feeling as if all volition had left her, she went into his arms; felt them tighten about her slender figure and guide her into smooth steps. He could dance. And well. She relaxed a trifle and dared a peck upwards. He appeared perfectly composed and at ease. He did not look out of place or strange. He might be any one of the young men in the club set.

stared curiously. Tally said: "Disappointed because I didn't wear my overalls and boots?"

To save her life she could not have answered one word. Relief swept her as the dance ended and she took her over to Geoffrey. Meeting Geoff's eyes squarely he held out his hand, saying: "We haven't met, Mr. Kensing; I'm Talbot Mack."

Geoffrey extended a limp, unwilling hand, appraising young Mack with hostile eyes as their hands clasped briefly. Then Nola sauntered up and greeted Tally with a warmth that froze Thord's frown on his face.

"I'm so glad you've come," she smiled, her eyes twinkling as she noted the growing circle about them. "I can't tell you how pleased I was when Jocelyn told me she had insisted on your being with us tonight. Has she introduced you to everyone? No?" Nola turned to Lyn who was palpably bewildered.

"I've introduced you, darling, introduce your guests of the evening. We want to know everyone, don't we, Tally?"

Jocelyn, her chin set stubbornly, took Nola and Tally on a round of the ballroom, her blue eyes becoming stormier with each introduction she performed.

Ruth Benton smiled archly. "What's the idea of holding out on the rest of us?" she scolded. "You can expect plenty of female visitors from now on!"

Most of Lyn's girl friends made similar remarks.

Jocelyn felt she had reached the bursting point when Eleanor Illington invited Tally to a party the following afternoon.

"I'm afraid Mr. Mack will have to disappoint you," she said, striving for control. "He has cows and chickens and a truck garden to look after."

"Yes," he agreed with imperturbable good humor. "I happen to be a farmer, Miss Illington."

Mocking

"WHY, that's marvelous!" Eleanor cooed. "I had no idea you were the young man from Texas."

A blast from the orchestra halted conversation. Without asking permission, Tally drew Jocelyn into his arms and danced her out on the floor. Geoffrey, a vexed expression on his usually mild face, cut in. Over his shoulder Jocelyn watched Tally find Nola and sweep her, laughing, into the dance.

There was a resentful twinge in the region of Lyn's heart.

Geoff blurted, "Just what is the idea of asking him here?"

"Because I wanted to."

"But why? You said you couldn't bear him."

"I can't."

"Then why on earth..."

"You don't understand women, Geoff."

"I guess I don't! I guess no man does."

"I think," mused Jocelyn, "there is one man who understands them far too well." A little laugh of self-derision escaped her. Tally had known very well just why he had been invited. Once again he had thwarted her.

Geoffrey, preoccupied, missed a step and trod on her small green slippers.

"Haven't you better call the veterinary and find out the state of your pony's health?" she suggested. "You certainly haven't your mind on dancing."

His eyes were uneasy. "Come outside with me, Lyn. I want to talk to you."

In the semi-darkness of a porch corner he lifted her chin with his finger-tips. "You do love me, don't you, Lyn? I've never questioned it before, but now—"

"Then why now?" she asked lightly, absorbing all the dear familiarity of him. This was the man she wanted for life. Substantial; dependable; her own kind of person. He would make a dutiful husband and—a fine father for their children. He was good to look at, too. He had a nice firm face; clear fair skin; pleasant hazel eyes; and...

"Of course I love you, Geoff," she declared.

He appeared satisfied. His lips brushed hers and he said: "I know our love affair has never been one of those wild, reckless things you read about in books and see in movies," he said; "but that sort of thing isn't real, anyhow. We aren't that kind of people, are we, Lyn? We are restrained, well-bred, intelligent persons who plan our lives with our heads instead of our emotions. That's why our marriage will be a success while those others will be failures. Look at the example your grandmother set!"

"Yes," Lyn thought, "I have. She spent her entire life wishing she had married another man! Is this quiet, friendly feeling I have for Geoff really love? Is it all I will ever feel? Or will marriage make a difference?"

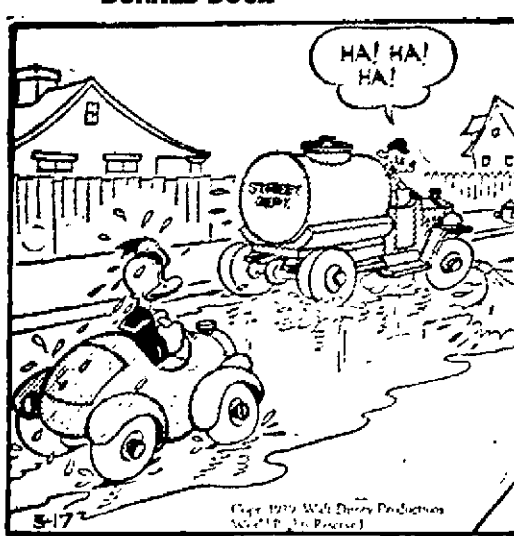

"You're shivering, dear," he broke in on her disturbing thoughts. "Let me take you inside."

The evening went merrily on for everyone but Jocelyn; or so she told herself. No matter who her dancing partner was Tally continued steadily and consistently cut in. He pursued her curiously; he smiled into her eyes; he clung to her hands when the music stopped. He behaved, to all appearances, as a man completely enthralled by a girl.

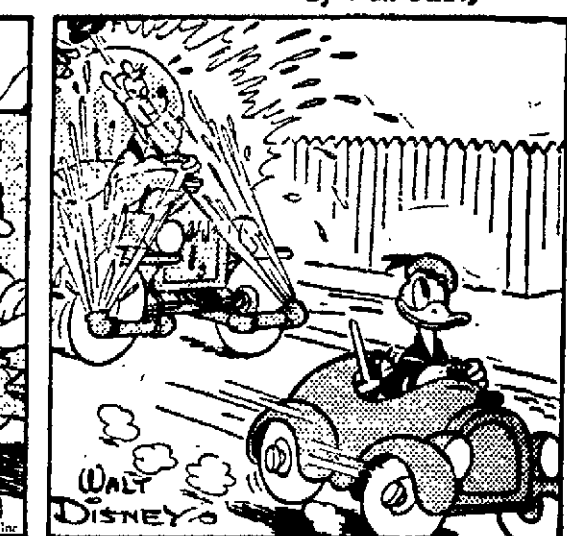

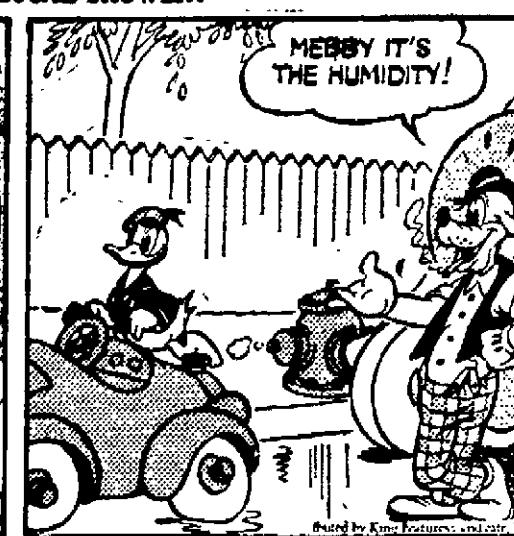

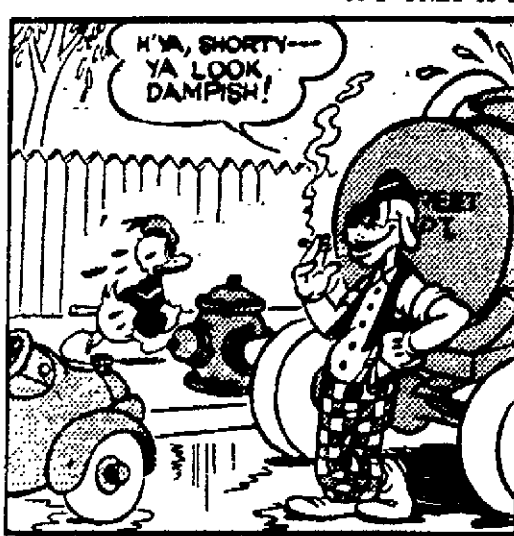

"Yet he isn't!" Jocelyn thought, hotly resentful. "Beneath it all he's mocking me, laughing at me, enjoying the way everyone is talking about us!"

Continued tomorrow.

Mohawks Take Colonials 8-5; Two Grudge Bouts Here Friday

Four Runs in Fifth Spell Defeat for Toddy Uhl and Co.

Errors Figure Prominently in Upstarters' Win—Mac Tiano Gets Two Hits, One a Homer

The Kingston Colonials and Mohawks Giants squared off in the opening game of the New York State League last night at the Athletic Field and the Giants won 8 to 5. Toddy Uhl survived 11 bingles and went the route for the Davemen. Buck Ewing used Toronto and Jackson with the latter getting the decision.

After knotting the contest at 4-4 in the third frame the Colonials committed two juicy and costly miscues and presented the game on a platter to the Ewing-men.

The usual opening day ceremonies took place before the battle with Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman tossing out the first pitch while Martin took a full swing for a strike.

Both Toronto and Uhl got through the first two frames without a score although they each experienced tough openers. But in the third it was a direct opposite. Toronto grounded to Schatzel for the first out in the Giants' third. Martin then lofted a triple into left center field. It looked as though Uhl might emerge without any damage as Husta flipped out Hobson. However, Buck Ewing punched single into left and Martin scampered home. Pelham landed onto a fast-breaking curve and shot it to left where Maines kicked the pill around. On the single, Ewing went to second and then when Maines boosted the sphere, continued to the hot corner. Uhl and Benjamin went into a conference and decided to walk Durant intentionally to fill the sacks.

Milton must have been disgusted with this move. On Uhl's first offering, the big first sacker crashed a tremendous triple into left field, scoring Ewing, Pelham and Durant. Uhl tossed out Hariston to end the nightmare.

Mac Tiano Hits Homer
With the count 4 to 0 against them the Davemen didn't take very long to square things again. Carl Husta slapped a sizzler down to Battle and beat it out for a scratch single. Benjamin kept things going with a lofty single to center. Bill Finger had good intentions of prolonging the rally as he lined one into right where Martin pulled it down on a dead run. Then came the hit. Mac Tiano, who popped easily to Battle in the first, caught onto one of Toronto's fast ones and sent it soaring into dead left for a homer. Mac crossed the pay-off dust standing up with the third run of the frame.

DuBois walked and was shoved over to third on Bill Thomas' sizzling two-ply smack down the left field foul stripe. The Colonials managed to tie the score when Battle muffed up Jack Schatzel's easy bouncer to this territory which permitted DuBois to romp in. With the count 1-2 on Neff, Ewing had enough of Toronto and called in Jackson who retired the side.

Locals Take Lead
Kingston took the lead in the fourth after Bill Finger pushed a single into center. Mac Tiano made another tremendous clout as the ball bounced against the screen on the backstop in left field. Finger scored on the rap and Tiano ankle to third. DuBois popped out to Pelham to end the frame.

The Giants put on the clincher in the fifth with four more runs. Although making but two hits the Ewingmen plodded in a quartet of markers. A walk to Hobson and Ewing who was hit in the back by Uhl opened the session. Pelham lofted one to Frank Neff who dropped the ball in Brooklyn style. Durant went down swinging. Pelham was caught napping off third. Benjamin tossed the pill to Husta who dropped it and Hobson came in. Hariston and Battle cracked out his hits to provide two more runs.

Errors Costly
Despite the defeat Uhl pitched effective ball. The errors by Husta and Neff exploded the works. In the absence of Charlie Francello, Bill Thomas was used at second and held down the sack capably. On Friday Glen Falls will be here.

Boiceville Nine and Grunies Clash in City League Game

Special Baseball Meeting Tonight

Following tonight's City League game, there will be a special open meeting held at 9 o'clock in the common council chambers for all managers, officials and players of the City League. A delegation from the Central Business Men's Association will also be in attendance at the specially arranged meeting. Business matters pertaining to the welfare of the twilight circuit will be discussed and a full attendance of all interested is urged.

Grunies, having split in two contests, need tonight's win to get back in the thick of the first half pennant race. The Boiceville team, losers to the Independents by an 8-1 count, can chalk up their initial twilight loop conquest by topping the Doughboys.

Big Joe Mahar, winner of his first start against the Wiltwicks by a 6-2 edge, is expected to be out there whipping 'em over for his second win of the season. Mahar throttled the Steigewald crew in his first effort with a 2-0 performance.

Lou Knapp is expected to lead off with Buddy Zoller, hook-ball artist, in an effort to jump into the victory column. Kelly will be in back of the platter for the Bakers with Fairbairn, of Phenicia, doing the catcher's duties for the Rangers.

Thursday—Grunewalds vs. Independents.

Albany, N. Y., May 17 (AP)—Because of injuries to high school grid stars, New York's Education Department is considering a mandatory change to "much safer" interscholastic rules.

Ellis H. Champlin, head of the department's physical education bureau, said a survey revealed accidents in high school football played under the scholastic rules are less than under the intercollegiate code. At present, state high schools use the intercollegiate rules.

We are considering an order requiring all schools to change to the interscholastic code next fall, Champlin said. He noted injuries last fall to 92 of every 1,000 state high school players.

A recent poll of state high school coaches showed 140 approved a change while 86 opposed it. Principal differences deal with safety measures and substitutions. Interscholastic rules also permit a forward pass from any point behind the line of scrimmage instead of at least five yards back.

Swim Schedule
Changes at 'Y'
Those who take part in activities at the Y. M. C. A. will note several changes in the schedule for swimming classes.

All of the ladies' classes will meet on Wednesdays until the close of the course on May 31. The morning groups will meet at 9:30 and the evening group at 7:15 o'clock.

The high school girls' classes have been disbanded until next fall. Schedule for the boys' classes: Monday and Thursday—Buddy Boys, non-swimmers, 4 p. m. Buddy Boys, swimmers, 4:30.

Tuesday and Friday—Student A. B. C. and older C swimmers, 4 p. m.; Student C. Eagles and Giants, non-swimmers, 4:30 p. m.; Student C. Eagles and Giants, swimmers, 5 p. m.

New Haven, Conn. Marty Servo, (Mario Severino), 135½, Schenectady, N. Y., technically knocked out Mike Angeri, 139½, White Plains, N. Y., (5).

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)
Head for the storm cellars, boys: Dizzy Dean is back.

He showed that yesterday with a five-inning relief trick during which the Brooklyn Dodgers were lucky to get more than a loud foul off him. He allowed only three hits and no runs, fanned five and walked none.

Brooklyn won the ball game 12-2, but the Daffness Boys did all their scoring before Old Diz ambled in for his first National League appearance of the year.

Zip Gone
It's not the same Diz now, though. His motion yesterday was lots more natural than it has been recently, but his fast ball had no more zip than a hangover. However, he has taken a page from King Carl Hubbell's book and is pitching with his head as much as with that famous right arm.

So Phil Wrigley may yet realize something on that $185,000 investment. And, with Hubbell on the road back, too, one of these fine Sundays you're going to hear your favorite umpire announcing a pair of batteries headed by Old Squarepants and Old Diz.

Both the Cubs and the New York Giants can use those lads. For, while the Cubs held fourth place in the National League, they dropped a game farther off the pace set by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Giants Drop to 7th
The Cards came from behind to top the Giants, 7-6, boost their first-place edge to a game and a half, and sink the New Yorkers into seventh place. With no Hubbell handy, Bill Terry called on a couple of run-of-the-mine tossers, and they gave Johnny Mize, Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin a home-run ball apiece.

Another home-run trio turned up for the New York Yankees. Babe Dahlgren, George Selkirk and Joe Gordon accounted for six runs as the Yanks topped the St. Louis Browns, 7-5, for their sixth straight win. The Yanks needed the victory to keep 1½ games in front in the American League, for Boston's second-place Red Sox collected 19 hits to jar the Chicago White Sox, 18-4.

Reds in Tie
Cincinnati's Reds, largely topped by Ernie Lombardi's bat and Lee Grissom's suppone, climbed into a second-place tie in the National League by drubbing the Boston Bees, 4-1. Joe Bowman pitched a nine-inning and drove in four runs himself in pacing Pittsburgh to an 8-5 decision over the Phillies, which boosted the Bucs to sixth place.

The first night game of the year, featuring Connie Mack's Athletics in an evening "at home," went in overtime before the Cleveland Indians paraded five runs across in the tenth to top the A's, 8-3. Tommy Bridges turned in his fifth straight flinging triumph as the Detroit Tigers whacked Washington's slipping Senators, 6-2.

Walker in Hunt
Mickey Walker, the "toy bulldog" of middleweight fame, is going prospecting in a big way. Walker will tour the country, he said today, giving boxing exhibitions with sparring partners and local fighters and through the personal appearances he hopes to uncover what he is looking for.

Walker will find opposition ahead of him, notably Signor Antonio Pietro Cordaro, a sports writer of Des Moines, Iowa, who is making a house to house canvass of Iowa in search of his white hope. At the moment Signor Cordaro is pinning his hopes on a tall, rawboned farm hand named Orlan Ott, of Hartley, Iowa. The youngster is just 17, weighs 218 pounds, stands 6 feet 1½ inches tall and virtually a duplicate of Dempsey in physique. He pulled on the gloves for the first time last December in a district Golden Gloves tournament and since then has won eight bouts, four of them by knockouts. He lost a split decision to Tony Novak of Kansas City, National A.A.U. and Golden Gloves heavyweight champion.

Lighting Twig's as Cure
LUBEC, MAINE—Elderly Howards Robbins believes that carrying a small piece of ash tree "with lightning in it" has helped spare him twinges of rheumatism.

Norfolk, Va.—Red Lewis, 173, Richmond, Va., outpointed Dominic Ceccarelli, 171½, New York, (8).

New York—Johnny Rinaldi, 141, New York, outpointed Bernie Friedkin, 137, Brooklyn, (8).

Looks Tough for Henry Armstrong
London, May 17 (AP)—The welterweight championship of the world is liable to descend on the brow of Ernie Roderick, an amiable rat breeder from Liverpool, a week from tomorrow night.

Roderick, the British welter czar, fights Henry Armstrong for the world crown at Harringay Arena and, if the British critics are to be believed, he has a good chance of whipping the little man from St. Louis.

Armstrong is far from top shape. He has an ugly looking left hand, souvenir of his last American fight, against Davey Day, and his timing is off.

Roderick is a tough man, even in a land that produced Tommy Farr. Henry is liable to re-break the bones in that hand the first time he shoots a stiff one at the Roderick chin.

Another factor in Ernie's favor is the foul rule. Over here the first low blow disqualifies a fighter. To Armstrong, who often loses two and three rounds a fight on low punches, this is a real threat.

Wrestling Last Night
(By The Associated Press)
Houston, Tex.—Bobby Siegel, 124, Houston, stopped Kid Laredo, 120, Monterey, Mexico, (4).

Los Angeles—Baby Arizmendi, 136½, Los Angeles, and Eddie Marcus, 131½, Los Angeles, drew, (8).

Damages Case Sent To Jury Today

Testimony was closed this morning in the civil action brought by Marie Burhans, mother of Charles I. Rehnstrom, against Charles Amato and Harry Weisman to recover for the death of Rehnstrom who died following an affair last December at the Strand Tavern of which Weisman is proprietor. Plaintiff charges that an attack made on the deceased by Amato, bartender at the place, resulted in his death. James Amato, who operates a gas station across the street from the tavern, was called and testified he was in the place on the evening of December 28, last, when the affair took place. A second cousin of Charles Amato, bartender, he said Rehnstrom came in and had been talkative and abusive and used vile language to Amato. The witness said he saw Rehnstrom make a pass at Amato behind the bar but could not say that the blow was landed. Amato took hold of Rehnstrom across the bar, told him to get out of the place and then came around in front of the bar where he struck Rehnstrom four or five times in the face and on the body.

On cross examination he said he had stated in his answer to the complaint that Amato had acted in self defense and that the action he took against Rehnstrom was justified. His bartender he testified had formerly operated the place. Mr. Weisman defends the action on the ground that he was not present at the time of the alleged assault, that he is not responsible for the death of Rehnstrom and had nothing to do with the affair. He is named with Amato as a defendant.

At the close of testimony Andrew J. Cook, appearing for Amato moved for a dismissal. The motion was denied by the court. On behalf of Weisman, Robert G. Groves moved for a dismissal of the complaint as against Weisman and this too was denied.

Summons by Chris J. Flanagan for plaintiff and by defense counsel was then started. The case went to the jury after summations and the charge by the court.

Dumm Re-Elected YMCA President

At a most enthusiastic meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A., Clarence Dumm was unanimously re-elected president for the year 1939-1940. President Dumm thanked the board for their confidence in placing him again at the helm of the association, and asked their continued cooperation in building character in the community. The president will be assisted by the following officers who were also unanimously elected: Vice-president, Howard St. John; secretary, Russell H. Broughton; treasurer, Emil G. Boessneck, Jr.; assistant treasurer, Clarence S. Rowland.

Appreciation of the board goes to Chester A. Baltz, Sr., who served as vice-president, and to James W. Scott who acted as secretary.

The annual election by the membership resulted in the selection of the following board of directors for three years: James A. Guttridge, C. S. Treadwell, Clifford Rose, A. B. Shufeldt, C. E. Wonderly, E. J. Trowbridge, Raymond Garrahan and Allan Hansen. The same election returned for three years, James A. Guttridge and Joseph M. Fowler as trustees.

President Dumm thanked the nominating committee, composed of Clarence S. Rowland, chairman; Howard St. John and Stanley Matthews for their services.

A gift, a token of appreciation for the faithful service which Charles Henke has rendered the Kingston Y. M. C. A., was presented by the board of directors.

The board of directors heartily approved a plan worked out tentatively by a group of ladies under the leadership of Mrs. Adam Thiel to raise money for the repair of the swimming pool. Details will be announced at a later date.

Special thanks were expressed to The Freeman, The Leader and all who helped make the past year a fine success.

PICKET AND MINE WORKER TANGLE

A tense situation prevailed for a few moments at a coal mine near Harlan, Ky., when these two men, one a picket and one a worker, threatened to engage in a fight. Note the rock in the hand of one of them, while the other reaches into his shirt. This was one of the incidents which occurred as some of the Harlan area coal mines reopened in spite of opposition by the United Mine Workers.

Harry Gray Chosen President of Clubs

for troops, he pointed out that in the Scout movement is the opportunity of building up the country's greatest boy movement.

In the country the aim is to bring to one in each four boys of Scout age the idea of Scouting. In Ulster-Greene district this movement is already well under way and at present one in every 3 1/2 boys are being reached. The membership in the district has grown from 864 at the first of the year to 896 to date, and shortly there will be eight additional troops organized. In the United States today there are 1,271,000 Boy Scouts under leadership of some 290,000 men and activities to be carried out this season is expected to bring the membership up to an all time record.

President William Jackson of the Federation, presented Walter Tremper who, in introducing Dr. Keator, told of the importance of Scouting and the work which is being done among the younger boys through Scouting. As an important factor in cutting down juvenile delinquency through the teachings of scout leaders he said the movement was well worth while and in these days of temptations the Scout movement was one of the greatest things toward making better citizenship.

Mr. Tremper called attention to the Court of Honor which will be held Friday at the court house at 7:45 o'clock under sponsorship of the Federation.

The report of Treasurer Al Reese showed a good balance in the treasury.

An invitation for the Federation to participate in the annual Memorial Day parade was received. Because so many members paraded with other organizations it was deemed not advisable to parade as a Federation.

The Comforter softball team which has been meeting with difficulty in getting players out this season asked to withdraw from the league. The request was granted. Teams which have been scheduled to play the Comforters and were given a forfeit will not be credited with such forfeit and the Comforter schedule will be credited to all teams as a "by" in the standings. The games will be eliminated from the record of standings.

The matter of an amendment to the by-laws allowing a corresponding and a recording secretary instead of a general secretary was presented. This matter will be submitted to all clubs for a vote. The offer was made by the Rev. Mr. Chilton. His offer was made to relieve the secretary of a vast amount of work and divide the work between two members. Both would co-operate to draw up the sports schedule.

A co-operative picnic was left open for further investigation.

Establishment of a horseshoe pitching league was discussed. The parks have been arranged for and also equipment. No action was taken. An invitation to be guests at an open house at the West Hurley Epworth League and the Presbyterian Juniors, two organizations which entered the Federation to compete in the softball league but later dropped out of play, were both eliminated from membership by a vote of the Federation.

Shovel Dips Up Bluestone Slabs

Days of the once flourishing bluestone industry in Ulster county have been recalled when the big shovel of the Board of Public Works excavating on Abel street, where a new pavement is being laid, uncovered huge bluestone slabs.

The bluestone slabs are 6 by 8 feet in size and fully a foot thick. They were laid years ago as a roadbed over which rode the huge stone trucks carting bluestone slabs from the quarries to the stone dock where the stone was loaded on barges.

The stones being uncovered by the shovel show the grooves in the stone caused by the tracks of the heavy wagons.

The stones are being cut up and used for curbing by the city.

As Abel street has been repaired from time to time the top was never removed and a new top laid over the old. As a result Abel street, near the gravel bank and for some distance toward Broadway is fully 18 inches or more higher than the street curbs.

In order to do a good job in laying a new pavement the public works board placed the shovel at work excavating the old top and bringing the street back to curb level before placing the new pavement.

Some delay has been encountered since the shovel has struck the large blue stone slabs.

V.F.W. Annual Ball At Elks' This Year

Ed. J. Wortman, chairman of the entertainment committee announces that the second annual benefit ball and entertainment of Joyce-Schirick Post, 1386, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be held at the Elks Club on June 22.

There will be a broadcasting orchestra and a five-act floor show and a larger crowd than last year is expected. A year ago the ball was held at Golden Rule Inn, but anticipating a larger crowd this year it was decided that the Elks Club would furnish more room.

Tickets will go on sale today and the Vets will appreciate all co-operation.

The Road to the DIVORCE COURT Is Paved With

CARROTS and PEAS

Men like variety! They like to be surprised. They want food that is tempting and different even more than they want low grocery bills. To your husband dinner time is, or should be, the high point of the day. It's the pivot about which his whole home life turns, and in the interests of his love and affection you just cannot afford to trifle with his appetite—you can't afford to risk "ration routine."

Especially when the cure is so simple. Maybe you've forgotten that there are anywhere from sixty-five to ninety different kinds of vegetables and fruits, canned and fresh, in a well-stocked food store; dozens of different kinds of meats, fish, sea foods; spices galore; prepared foods by the score—every one lending itself to several delicious recipes! Maybe you've forgotten, too, that there is a cook book somewhere in your house, brimming over with ideas that are really fun to try out. Maybe you've forgotten that one of the reasons your husband married you was because he thought you'd serve him a swell dinner every night. Have you forgotten? He hasn't!

Remember that old song: "Monday hasenpfeffer! Tuesday string beans! Wednesday s-soo-OUP! Thursday roast beef! Friday fi-ISH!" Surest way to lose a husband is to let him know what to expect for dinner every night in the week!

"She sued a rare juicy steak for alienation of affections." You've never seen that in the papers—but don't smile, lady,—it might happen to you some day. Just go on serving carrots and peas every Thursday, come rain, snow or maid's-night-out; just persist in your potato-patty pattern every Monday and the halibut habit on Fridays—keep at it long enough—and you'll lose your man.

You may be awfully proud of the way you fix tapioca pudding—but tapioca can taste pretty flat, served too often. Even the best of foods quickly lose their savor to a hungry husband when they come at him regular as clockwork on a weekly merry-go-round. And there lies danger! For "ration routine" has ruined more marriages than the fabled mother-in-law; it has broken up more homes than the bluest-eyed chorus girl who ever crossed Times Square!

"Ration routine" is doubly dangerous because it's so insidious; your husband himself may not consciously realize what's wrong. But while he picks at his food he is probably muttering, deep in his heart, "Vicious vittles!" and dreaming of a cottage in a magical land where he can get something wonderful and different and new for dinner every night.

You pride yourself on being a wise and thrifty shopper! Do you know that it's thrifty, economical shoppers like you who are most likely to be at fault? They buy cautiously, they save money, they shun extravagance and sooner or later they fall into a food rut. Then beef stew goes on the table every Wednesday or maybe every other Wednesday, fried perch becomes a regular Friday nightmare, and that's when the trouble really begins.

If you doubt it, try this little experiment! Let your husband do the shopping next Saturday afternoon when he has the time. Don't tell him what to buy, let the choice be his. It's ten to one he'll come home with things you would never dream of buying yourself—delicious palate-teasing items—foods that will make dinner time a real event—and they won't be hard to prepare, either!

Are you guilty of "ration routine?" If you are, you probably don't know it and you'd better watch your step before it's too late. Forget carrots and peas! Forget those insipid, inevitable, tiresome dishes that have become a habit with you and may well become a curse! Forget—for just a little while—the staples, the "standards" and the "here-we-are-agains," and step out and go to town! There are "surprises" aplenty waiting for you in your favorite food store, listed for you today in the Daily Freeman food ads—glorious, marvelous, delicious things to eat! Invest in them for your husband's sake. Resolve now to feed him handsomely and well.

Cut loose, lady, and treat yourself to some luxury buying at the grocery! Do it today—and knock his eye out with something super-delicious tonight!

Damages Case Sent To Jury Today

Testimony was closed this morning in the civil action brought by Marie Burhans, mother of Charles I. Reinhorn, against Charles Amato and Harry Weissman to recover for the death of Reinhorn who died following an affair last December at the Strand Tavern of which Weissman is proprietor. Plaintiff charges that an attack made on the deceased by Amato, bartender at the place, resulted in his death. James Amato, who operates a gas station across the street from the tavern, was called and testified he was in the place on the evening of December 28, last, when the affair took place. A second cousin of Charles Amato, bartender, he said Reinhorn came in and had been talkative and abusive and used vile language to Amato. The witness said he saw Reinhorn make a swing at Amato behind the bar but could not say that the blow was landed. Amato took hold of Reinhorn across the bar, told him to get out of the place and then came around in front of the bar where he struck Reinhorn four or five times in the face and on the body.

The witness said he saw marks on Amato's face next day but had not seen Reinhorn land the blows. Amato also had marks on his hand next day. The witness Amato said he had not been in the place constantly but had come in at various times during the day of December 28, from his gas station across the street. He heard Reinhorn doing a lot of talking and calling Charles Amato vile names. Apparently the remarks were all directed to Charles Amato.

Harry Weissman, proprietor, was last called. He said he had instructed Amato to maintain order. At the time of the affair he was not in the place, having left when Amato came on duty in the afternoon. He said he was not notified of the affair and did not know of it until he returned to the place after 10 o'clock when everything was over.

On cross examination he said he had stated in his answer to the complaint that Amato had acted in self defense and that the action he took against Reinhorn was justified. This bartender he testified had formerly operated the place.

Mr. Weissman defends the action on the ground that he was not present at the time of the alleged assault, that he is not responsible for the death of Reinhorn and had nothing to do with the affair. He is named with Amato as a defendant.

At the close of testimony Andrew J. Cook, appearing for Amato moved for a dismissal. The motion was denied by the court. On behalf of Weissman Robert G. Groves moved for a dismissal of the complaint as against Weissman and this too was denied.

Summons by Chris J. Flanagan for plaintiff and by defense counsel was then started. The case went to the jury after summations and the charge by the court.

President Dumm thanked the board for their confidence in placing him again at the helm of the association, the fourth consecutive year, and asked their continued co-operation in building character in the community. ## PICKET AND MINE WORKER TANGLE

A tense situation prevailed for a few moments at a coal mine near Harlan, Ky., when these two men, one a picket and one a worker, threatened to engage in a fight. Note the rock in the hand of one of them, while the other reaches into his shirt. This was one of the incidents which occurred as some of the Harlan area coal mines reopened in spite of opposition by the United Mine Workers.

Harry Gray Chosen President of Clubs

for troops, he pointed out that in the Scout movement is the opportunity of building up the country's greatest boy movement.

In the country the aim is to bring to one in each four boys of Scout age the idea of Scouting. In Ulster-Greene district this movement is already well under way and at present one in every 3 1/2 boys are being reached. The membership in the district, has grown from 864 at the first of the year to 896 to date, and shortly there will be eight additional troops organized. In the United States today there are 1,271,000 Boy Scouts under leadership of some 290,000 men and activities to be carried out this season is expected to bring the membership up to an all time record.

President William Jackson of the Federation, presented Walter Tremper who, in introducing Dr. Kestor, told of the importance of Scouting and the work which is being done among the younger boys through Scouting. As an important factor in cutting down juvenile delinquency through the teachings of scout leaders he said the movement was well worth while and in these days of temptations the Scout movement was one of the greatest things toward making better citizenship. Mr. Tremper called attention to the Court of Honor which will be held Friday at the court house at 7:45 o'clock under sponsorship of the Federation.

The report of Treasurer Al Reese showed a good balance in the treasury.

An invitation for the Federation to participate in the annual Memorial Day parade was received. Because so many members parade with other organizations it was deemed not advisable to parade as a Federation.

The Comforter softball team which has been meeting with difficulty in getting players out this season asked to withdraw from the league. The request was granted. Teams which have been scheduled to play the Comforters and were given a forfeit will not be credited with such forfeit and the Comforter schedule will be credited to all teams as a "by" in the standings. The games will be eliminated from the record of standings.

The matter of an amendment to the by-laws allowing a corresponding and a recording secretary instead of a general secretary was presented. This matter will be submitted to all clubs for a vote. The offer was made by the Rev. Mr. Chilton. His offer was made to relieve the secretary of a vast amount of work and divide the work between two members. Both would co-operate to draw up the sports schedule.

A co-operative picnic was left open for further investigation. Establishment of a horseshoe-pitching league was discussed. The parks have been arranged for and also equipment. No action was taken. An invitation to be guests at an open house at the "Y" was laid over until next fall.

West Hurley Epworth League and the Presbyterian Juniors, two organizations which entered the softball league but later dropped out of play, were both eliminated from membership by a vote of the Federation.

Shovel Dips Up Bluestone Slabs

Days of the once flourishing bluestone industry in Ulster county have been recalled when the big shovel of the Board of Public Works excavating on Abel street, where a new pavement is being laid, uncovered huge bluestone slabs.

The bluestone slabs are 6 by 8 feet in size and fully a foot thick. They were laid years ago as a roadbed over which rode the huge stone trucks carting bluestone slabs from the quarries to the stone dock where the stone was loaded on barges.

The stones being uncovered by the shovel show the grooves in the stone caused by the tracks of the heavy wagons.

The stones are being cut up and used for curbing by the city. As Abel street has been repaired from time to time the top was never removed and a new top laid over the old. As a result Abel street, near the gravel bank and for some distance toward Broadway is fully 18 inches or more higher than the street curbs.

In order to do a good job in laying a new pavement the public works board placed the shovel at work excavating the old top and bringing the street back to curb level before placing the new pavement.

Some delay has been encountered since the shovel has struck the large blue stone slabs.
